HIGH COURT RULES OIL MAGNATE MUST SERVE JAIL TERM

Millionaire Operator, Convicted For Contempt In Refusing to Answer Questions During Teapot Dome Investigation by a Senate Committee, Must Go to Prison for Three Months and Pay a Fine of $500, Following Defeat in United States Supreme Tribunal.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(By the Associated Press.)—The conviction of Harry F. Sinclair for contempt for refusing to answer questions during the Teapot Dome investigation by the senate oil committee was approved today by the Supreme court.

Under the decision, the oil operator must serve three months in jail and pay a fine of $500. Justice Butler, who some months ago delivered the opinion cancelling the naval oil reserve leases, spoke for the court, emphasizing the importance of protecting the individual from unreasonable and arbitrary disclosure of his private affairs, he said that questions put to Sinclair were not of that character.

The fact that the information sought by the committee might be of importance in a suit pending against Sinclair did not excuse him from answering, the justice stated, because the information was properly within the inquiry of the committee and the questions were pertinent.

Cites Mal Daugherty Case. Justice Butler stated that the court in its decision in the Mal Daugherty case had laid down the rights of the two houses of congress to conduct investigations necessary to aid legislation, but that neither house had the right to inquire into the private affairs by requiring disclosures not in aid of legislation. During the investigation of the naval oil reserve leases by the senate committee, Sinclair testified several times, but refused to answer certain questions concerning the Teapot Dome lease, taking the position that because a grand jury was considering indictments, the senate committee had lost jurisdiction.

His counsel contended that as court proceedings had been begun against Sinclair, alleging conspiracy to defraud the United States, he was within his rights in refusing to answer questions before the committee relating to the contracts and leases upon which the prosecution was based.

After his conviction in the trial court to give it instructions on five points more important law points involved. The Supreme court, at the request of the government, consented to pass on all phases of the appeal instead of answering the (Continued on Page Ten)

CLAIM CONVICT KILLER OF FIVE Nebraska Prisoner Said to Have Admitted Many Slayings.

Word was received by Chief of Police Johnstone Monday morning from the United States Department of Justice that Pete Brown, who was sentenced by District Judge Broadway to a year in the state reformatory last month, was an escaped inmate of the Patton, Calif., insane asylum, and according to his own admission had killed five women in Pacific coast cities.

Brown was arrested here March 13 by Officer Frank Robbins who caught him selling pre-cancelled stamps in University Place. After a couple of days of investigation, Brown admitted breaking into the warehouse of the Western Supply Co., 820 N street. He was sentenced by Judge Broadway March 15.

According to the letter from the department of justice, signed by Director J. E. Hoover, Pete Brown, known in California as P. H. Brown, was arrested August 11, 1926 in San Bernardino, Calif. for vagrancy and investigation for murder. He was released to Santa Barbara officials. Mr. Hoover quoted the following from the department's records: "This man admits strangling nine women in Pacific coast cities, five of whom he killed. He is insane, and escaped from the Patton, Cal., insane asylum."

BODY OF SLAIN GIRL FOUND IN INDIANA CREEK

Edith Mae Dierdorf, 10, Disappeared From Home January 27.

HANDS AND FEET WIRED TOGETHER

Discovery is Made by School Teacher Out Picking Flowers.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., April 8.—(By the Associated Press.)—A country school principal's search for wild flowers resulted yesterday in discovery of the body of Edith Mae Dierdorf, 10-year-old west Terre Haute news girl, who disappeared January 27.

Lodged against a log in Bussers creek near Paxton, Ind., hands and feet wired together and a deep hole in the top of the head, the body was found by Nimrod Slaven, Pleasantville, Ind., school principal who with his wife and four children was picking spring wild flowers in the woods. The body was too far out in the creek for Slaven to reach, but Deputy Sheriff H. H. Harvey, whom he called to the scene, swam out and retrieved it. It was taken to Sullivan where Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dierdorf, parents of the girl, identified it as their daughter's from a signet ring, shoes and a striped coat.

Only One Clue Uncovered. From the date of Edith Mae's disappearance until yesterday, just ten weeks later, but one clue to her fate had been uncovered. That was the finding near a highway bridge over Bussers creek of the girl's newspaper bag, blood clotted and with hairs adhering to the cloth. It was about six miles from this bridge that the body was found today.

Officers expressed belief the girl had been murdered and tossed from the bridge into the creek which was flooded swollen at the time of her disappearance.

BURLINGTON TO GET BUS PERMIT

Curtiss Declares Railway Organization Will Be Granted License.

Private Operators Plan to Oppose Additional Competition.

A few minor conflicts in schedules between Lincoln and Hastings were expected to be ironed out Monday afternoon in order to permit the Burlington Transportation company to begin operating its bus lines in Nebraska Tuesday morning.

At the close of the hearing before the state railway commission Monday morning, Chairman John Curtiss told newspaper reporters that the Burlington's application would be granted.

"Under the present law," he explained, "the commission only has authority to require the company to furnish proper protection for passengers and maintain service which the commission believes is best for the public."

Ther presence of several independent bus operators at the hearing and the exhaustive questioning of Burlington officials by their attorneys, however, indicated that some action might be taken to prevent the Burlington from extending its bus service.

Bus Companies Object. It is contended by some of the bus operators that under the present law the railway commission has authority to prevent additional competing service on certain routes in the interest of public service.

This is not the attitude of the commission, however, its interpretation of the law being that there are no restrictions as to the number of competing lines that may operate over a given route so long as proper service is maintained. The Burlington Transportation Co., who also submitted to the president of the Burlington railroad commission, told the commission that the company is prepared to begin operation on its routes between Omaha and Lincoln and Hastings Tuesday morning.

In response to questioning, he said that the stock in the bus company is owned by the Burlington railroad company. The bus company is capitalized at $500,000, half of which is paid up.

He also stated that application for authority to operate supplemental bus service have also been made in Illinois, Missouri, and Iowa. Ten buses have already been purchased by the company. Five of these will be placed in service in Nebraska.

LOWMAN HOLDS PATROL VESSEL WITHIN RIGHTS

Official Justifies Firing on Steamer "Juan" In Chesapeake Bay.

GUARDS BELIEVED LIQUOR ON BOARD

Forced Shoot Five Times After Running Up Signal "Heave To!"

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(By the Associated Press.)—Assistant Secretary Lowman said today that the Norwegian steamer Juan, halted by shots from a coast guard patrol boat in Chesapeake bay Friday night, was stopped because the coast guard had information that steamships from the West Indies were landing liquor in the bay before docking in Baltimore. He added that the law made it mandatory for the coast guard to take such action.

Mr. Lowman, after a full report of the incident had been received by coast guard headquarters, said that it would be regarded as a closed case unless complaint was received.

He drew attention to statutes which gave the coast guard full power to stop and board vessels within four leagues of the coast, using force if necessary.

Chief Boatman Miken, who commanded the patrol boat, reported to coast guard headquarters today that he had ordered the steamer Juan, Norway, to halt by running up a code flag. When she fired no attention to the flag he fired a blank shot and when she did not comply he fired a "sharp" shot.

She still failed to heave to he fired three more shots, the last one landing about 1,200 feet from the vessel, after which she heaved to. Two of his crew, he said, boarded the Juan and searched her. They found no contraband, he said, nor any violation of the law.

Norwegian Minister Bachke today requested the Norwegian consul general in New York to forward full details of the incident. It is expected that the legation, like the Canadian legation in the case of the sinking of the Tm Alone, will ask the state department for the American government reports on the incident.

WEAVER VETOES TRIO OF BILLS

Salary Increases For Court Reporters Among the Dead.

Two Omaha Pension Measures Are Also Disapproved Of.

Three more bills passed by the legislature have been vetoed by Governor Weaver, increasing the total number of proposed laws disapproved by him to 10. The latest ones to meet executive disfavor are: S. F. 115.—Increasing salaries of district court reporters from $2,750 a year to $3,000 and allowing their hotel and traveling expenses in addition to be paid by the state.

H. R. 237.—Pensions for employees of Omaha utilities district.

H. R. 508.—Pensions for janitors employed by Omaha school district, and their widows.

In connection with the veto of the district court reporters' pay bill, Governor Weaver announced that he would have approved one granting those officials their traveling expenses, but in view of the fact that they earn a considerable amount in extra fees he did not think a salary raise is justified at this time, especially in view of the fact that the legislature four years ago raised their remuneration for transcripts from 10 cents per page to 15 cents. He is willing to present a measure carrying that feature alone, if the legislature desires him to do so.

Relative to the two pension bills for public employees at Omaha, he reiterated his objections presented in a former veto message of a bill for the pensioning of Douglas county employees.

Senators Kruever and Jewell introduced the court reporters' bill. The Omaha school janitors' pension measure was sponsored by Representative Howard, while that for the utility district employees bore the names of 12 Douglas county house members as introducers.

Representative McKay, one of the number, declared with emphasis that an attempt would be made to pass the bills.

DIPHTHERIA AT ACACIA HOUSE

Members of Fraternity Are Placed Under Quarantine.

Members of the Acacia fraternity 1503 H street, are being held in quarantine by the city health department as the result of the discovery Saturday that Sam Hare, Albin, who had been sick since Wednesday, was suffering from an attack of diphtheria.

Mr. Hare was removed to the university infirmary by Dr. W. W. Carver Saturday and the fraternity placed under quarantine. Cultures were taken of all members. Three students found to have positive cultures were placed in the hospital. They are Theodore Burgess, a freshman in the arts college and Hugo Carroll, a sophomore law student, both from Omaha, and Vernon Carroll, Sioux City, a senior in the college of business administration. Hare is a junior in the same college.

The party scheduled by the fraternity for last Saturday night was called off by orders of the city health department. It was expected to be able to lift the quarantine Monday night or Tuesday if further cases develop.

City health officials said there should be little danger from the disease at present as there are only three cases in the city.

Plan Calls for Sale of Whitehall and 40-acre Farm.

RESOLUTION CARRIED. The resolution calling on Governor Weaver to introduce a bill providing for the removal of the state home for dependent children was introduced by Representative Johnson and when put to a vote was declared carried by Speaker Coulter.

Thirty-nine members signed the resolution. Objections to the resolution were raised by Representative Ashton of Seward county who declared that it might not be wise to abandon the state's home at Milford. With 53,000 veterans of the World war the time may come when the state will need two homes to care for its ex-service men he said. Another objection raised by Mr. Ashton was that the children and the old soldiers should not be kept in the same institution. When the resolution was put to a vote there was a heavy chorus of "noes" but the speaker ruled it had carried.

Taminosian Claims Life In Jeopardy

If compelled to serve a year in jail, John I. Taminosian asserts his life will be jeopardized, in a plea for modification of his sentence filed personally in district court Monday.

Taminosian was sentenced by Judge Chappell to a year in jail and a fine of $500 imposed for manufacturing intoxicating liquor, following a trial in which Taminosian was his own attorney.

He pleads the jail sentence would jeopardize his life because of an operation several years ago, and that "he is now suffering and receiving medical attention."

The former Omaha cleaner explains that as a result of his operation, he lost his business, then his wife, because he could not support her and requests the court to modify the decree so that he "may pursue his lawful occupation the remaining years of his life as a law abiding citizen without being a burden on the taxpayers the rest of his life."

He says he is penitent, and deserves "the court's consideration because the spirits of justice will not permit him to perish in his old age."

TWO COUPLES TELL OFFICIALS ABOUT SWITCHING MATES

"We Loved Each Other and Didn't Think Anything Wrong," Woman Declares In Telling of Swap Made Easter Sunday by Mutual Agreement; Otto E. Slade and Horace Reed Placed Under Arrest While Their Wives Return to Respective Homes To Care for Children; Two of Latter Ill With Chicken Pox.

Because they traded mates without first obtaining divorces, two men of Bennet, Neb., are in jail and their wives with two children each were sent back to their homes after having been in custody of juvenile officers Monday morning.

Neighbors told Sheriff Hensel about "strange happenings" at the two homes and the two men—Otto E. Slade, 31, and Horace Reed, 29—were arrested each at the other's home about midnight last night by Deputies E. C. Ward and James W. Davis.

By mutual agreement, the trade had been made Easter Sunday, March 31, the quartet told officers following the arrests. The two couples met last August at a dance, and had been exchanging visits all winter.

Mrs. Zoa Slade, 33, told officers that her husband made the trade proposal to her early in January after informing her that he "never had loved" her.

Mrs. Martha Reed, 25, the other man's wife, was "good looking and had lots of pep," Slade informed his wife. Only a week ago Mrs. Slade agreed to trade after a "they had all talked it over," she said.

Agreed To Temporary Plan. "We agreed to a temporary plan with my husband spending nights at the Reed home, and Reed staying with me. We all loved each other and didn't think anything was wrong."

Mrs. Reed told a similar story. She said that Slade and she planned to move to Lincoln today to "straighten things out." Trouble in their home started five years ago, she said.

"Slade was to deed his garage in Bennet to me, and we were to live together in Lincoln until we got divorces and then marry."

Slade was proprietor of a garage at Bennet and Reed worked for the county as a road maintainer. The self Saturday evening in Wichita, Kas., April 29, 1919; and the Reeds in Burlington Junction, Mo., July 4, 1920.

Lad Jeli, 28-year-old Wilber farmer, died at 4:15 Monday morning at St. Elizabeth's hospital following a more than thirty-hour struggle for life after shooting himself Saturday evening with a 22 rifle. He never regained consciousness after his wife found him about 6:30 Saturday night lying in a pool of blood on the floor of their home nine and one-half miles west of Wilber.

The bullet which had lodged in the center of his brain was located by X-ray Dr. C. H. Arnold. There was little that could be done for the man.

Adopted Son Is Heir to Estate of Two Millions

DETROIT, April 8.—(AP)—James F. Smith, 9-year-old adopted son of the late Mrs. Hattie B. Smith, became heir to $2,000,000 through a decision handed down by Judge Arthur Webster of Circuit court.

Mrs. Smith's will left her estate of $2,000,000 to the adopted boy, but it was contested by relatives, including Mrs. Sarah E. Smith, aged mother of the late James W. Smith, pioneer truck body operator and husband of Hattie B. Smith.

Judge Webster in his decision did not set aside the will, but demanded specific performance of an agreement between Smith and his wife before Smith's death under which one-third of the estate was to be divided between his mother, three sisters, two sisters of his wife, and a niece. The adopted son, therefore, will receive two-thirds of the estate.

CANADIAN NOTE ON 'I'M ALONE' CASE PREPARED

Formal Representations of Government Sent to Legation.

Nation More Interested
In Treaty Than Actual Sinking.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(P)—Formal representations on the sinking of the run runner I'm Alone by a coast guard patrol boat in the Gulf of Mexico have been received from Ottawa by the Canadian legation for presentation to the state department.

Except for the brief announcement by the Canadian prime minister, Mackenzie King, that the sinking of the vessel, which was of Canadian registry, would be the subject of formal discussions between the American and Canadian governments, both Ottawa and the legation have been very reticent regarding the content of the note.

Unofficial views of the matter, however, are to the effect that the Canadians are more interested in the points at issue between the two governments over the anti-run smuggling treaty of 1924 between the United States and Great Britain—which binds Canada as a dominion of the British commonwealth—than they are over the actual sinking.

On two previous occasions when Canadian vessels were seized by coast guard vessels for run running, the Canadian government informally made known that it was not in sympathy with certain interpretations placed by the Americans on points in the 1924 treaty under which the ships were seized.

Want Dispute Settled.
It has been said in reliable quarters here that Great Britain and Canada are particularly interested in having these divergent viewpoints straightened out before a more serious event than that of the I'm Alone arises. The I'm Alone case is regarded as embracing most of the contested points and enables the governments to bring the matter up for discussion.

The usual procedure in such cases is for the diplomatic representative on the spot to study the information of the case which is available, draft a note and submit it to his government for approval or correction. The interested government thus returns the note to the legation, either approved with instructions to present it, or disapproved further action and instructing the diplomat to drop the case.

Since it has been thought that the Canadians were desirous of discussing the treaty, the points on which they have been unofficially expected to predicate their case are:

Whether the right under the treaty to search and seize suspected run runners within "one hour's sailing from shore" is interpreted by the Americans to imply right to pursue a vessel outside that limit for search and seizure.

Questions At Issue.
Whether the pursuit lasting more than a matter of a few hours and carrying the vessels far out on the high seas is considered by the Americans to be "hot and continuous." Whether another vessel that is the one which began the chase can take up the pursuit and subsequently sink the vessel, as was the case with the I'm Alone.

Whether the sinking of a vessel involving loss of life and property, as was the case of the I'm Alone, is not considered a violent means of enforcing the provisions of the treaty.

BOY, 13, LOSES CONTROL OF CAR; HITS ANOTHER

A car taken from in front of St. Elizabeth's hospital at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon by a 13-year-old boy crashed into a machine belonging to Claude Shamp, 3143 South Thirteenth street, a few moments later when the boy lost control of the car when he tried to turn a corner at Ninth and South streets.

The boy jumped out and ran to his home, 8 E. Dykstra, 836 South street, followed him and later told Officer Frank Robbins where the boy had gone. The stolen machine belonged to H. R. Young, Auburn, and was turned over to the owner after the boy and car had been taken to the police station. Both automobiles were slightly damaged.

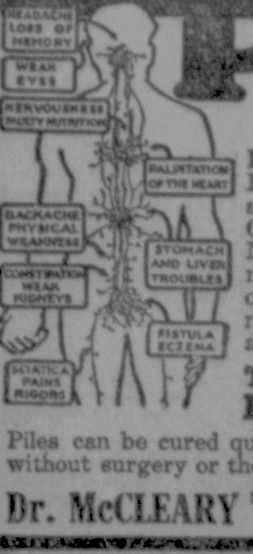

The youth will be turned over to juvenile court authorities. Communication with him was difficult Sunday as he is deaf and dumb.

SUSPECT ADMITS LINCOLN MURDER

Man Arrested In Gotham
However, Unknown To Local Police.

NEW YORK, April 8.—(P)—Michael O'Donnell, who police said admitted serving seven years in prison for a slaying in Lincoln, Neb., about ten years ago, was arrested today by detectives who accused him of shooting a man to death in an alleged speakeasy in Brooklyn a week ago.

O'Donnell was captured in a Turkish bath after offering resistance to detectives who said they located him by trailing a woman friend of his from a Brooklyn rooming house to a section of lower Manhattan where the bath is situated. Earlier in the day four other men had been arrested in the rooming house on charges of robbery. O'Donnell's arrest was believed to have resulted from information furnished by the four.

Police said O'Donnell, who was charged with homicide, shot and killed Stanley Seybowski of Brooklyn after an argument. They said they believed O'Donnell also had been arrested in Chicago and announced they had asked police of that city and of Lincoln for information about him.

Man Is Unknown Here.
Nothing is known here of Michael O'Donnell, Captain of Detectives Anderson said Monday morning. He was unable to recall anyone serving a seven-year sentence for slaying here at the time O'Donnell was said to have admitted being in prison here. He said that if the local department received fingerprints of the man that they could quickly identify him if he had ever served time here.

They were given treatment at a farm house.

SMALL TORNADO STRIKES CHICAGO

Storm Lasts Less Than Minute, But Does
$500,000 Damage.

CHICAGO, April 8.—(P)—A storm of tornado character, lasting less than a minute and whirling along a 100-foot path five blocks long, did $500,000 damage in Chicago's south shore district last night.

Eighty-fifth street was the road the twister followed, from Dan Ryan to East End avenue. Roofs were ripped from buildings on the north side of the street, trees were uprooted and several garages were blown down, but on the south side of the thoroughfare not even a bush was damaged.

Mrs. Adalbert Barnham described the storm as "an unearthly shrieking." Homes were shaken and windows shattered. Mrs. Barnham called her son to help her hold the kitchen door shut against the force of the wind, but said that a sudden gust broke that latch and hurled them to the floor.

Numerous storms were reported in the Chicago district last night. At Hammond, Ind., lightning struck an oil tank of the Roxana Petroleum Co. refineries, killing a workman, J. E. Pemberton, 23, and igniting 4,000 gallons of oil.

HOOPER FACES BUSIEST WEEK

Short Time Remains Before
Convening of Special Session.

Final Draft of Message to Congress Ready
in a Few Days.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(P)—President Hoover today faced one of the busiest weeks he has encountered since his inauguration. He entered it, however, considerably refreshed by his outing Saturday, which took him ninety miles away from his cool mountain retreat on the Rapidan river in Virginia and enabled him to escape part of the record-breaking heat wave endured by the capital over the week-end.

Only a week remains before the new congress convenes in special session, one of the principal tasks confronting the president was the completion of his message. He finished the first draft several days ago and immediately began the work of revision.

The message is expected to be in its final form in a few days, but the chances are that it will not be transmitted to congress until April 16, leaving next Monday free for the senate and house to organize.

Now that the farm relief billings are out of the way and the senate and house agriculture committees have turned to the task of writing their bills, many members have been given time to speculate on the recommendations which the message will contain. Some are familiar with its outlines in a broad way, but all are eager to find out the details.

Rates to Be Revised.
That it will deal primarily with the problem of assisting agriculture through revision of tariff rates on commodities competing with its products and by setting up a federal farm board and subsidiary agencies with broad powers is taken for granted, since that is what congress was called to consider.

Whether it will contain other recommendations, including postponement or repeal of the national origins provision of the immigration law, has not been disclosed, although the president's opposition to it was made known when he issued his proclamation declaring the new basis of immigration quotas effective July 1.

In addition to the work on his message and many conferences incident to the approach of a session of congress, together with the usual war duties of his office, recent developments in the Mexican revolution which have threatened the safety of American border towns also will claim a good deal of the president's attention. He upon Secretary Stimson to go over this situation with him today, including the steps taken by the state and war departments to protect American lives and property.

MYSTERY MAN IN LIQUOR CASE

Michaelson's Lawyer
Says Wet Goods In Stranger's Trunk.

CHICAGO, April 8.—(P)—A "mysterious stranger" today had entered the case of Congressman M. A. Michaelson of Chicago, under federal indictment in Florida on charges of smuggling, possession and transporting liquor.

The congressman made his first public statement yesterday, denying all the government charges. He said his trunks and baggage transported to the United States from Cuba "did not contain any intoxicating liquors of any sort or character," that he committed no offense against the government of the United States; that "I am not guilty of any charge contained in the indictment," and that "I will establish beyond the possibility of a doubt the truth of this, my statement."

Reporters sought to question him, but were referred to his attorney, Benedict Short.

The lawyer said he was told by Congressman Michaelson that he had gone to Panama as a member of the waterways committee and that the party stopped in Cuba on the return trip.

"There was one man in the party," Short said, "who was not a member of congress. Mr. Michaelson kindly gave him his congressional frank. It was this man whose trunk held the liquor."

The attorney said he would not divulge the man's name at this time.

Seek Masked Men Roaming Chicago Jail

CHICAGO, April 8.—(P)—Masked men roaming the subterranean passages of the new county jail gave Sheriff John Traeger something mysterious to think about today.

It looked like a jail delivery at first, but no one had ever heard of escaping prisoners wearing masks. Workmen in the jail basement gave the alarm, declaring that five men, four of whom wore masks and one of whom was armed with a club, appeared out of nowhere in the pump room last night.

"They lined up against the wall," said Jack Patton, a steamfitter, one fellow waved a club and said he would kill us if we said a word. We stood there about five minutes, then I looked around. They had vanished."

Sheriff Traeger explored the tunnels and passageways under the jail, but found no trace of anyone. He checked and re-checked the jail roster, and accounted for all prisoners. The sheriff thought he had a clue when he followed a tunnel used for steam pipes, until it came to a trap door which opened into the jail receiving room upstairs, but grand piano was atop the trap door, removing that from consideration.

Today

Prosperity and People.
Airplanes and Our Blessings.
Better Life for R. R. Men.
One Horse Saves 500.

By Arthur Brisbane.

Start the working week in a thankful mood, even though call money may cost you 30 per cent before you know where you are.

This country's population is growing at the rate of 1,400,000 a year, one new American every 23 seconds. Our population has doubled since 1890.

New York City will have, in its metropolitan area, 30,000,000 population before 1950.

Wealth is accumulated, in a way to make Croesus feel like a gypsy. We should be grateful and prepared to defend what we have.

If you think the native born are better than others, which is not so, note that of the 1,400,000 increase in population each year, 1,150,000 are born here.

Not even the federal reserve board can hold back a nation such as this.

Americans are beginning to own the outside world. Before the war, Britain controlled some of our railroads. Now Americans own more than 15 billions of foreign securities. In South America before the war, American investments amounted to 100 millions. Now they have risen to 2,500 millions.

Uncle Sam is rich. When everybody owns his billions, you should be a billion or two in national safety.

It is good news that more than 700 airplanes will be added to the national fleet this coming year, at a cost of $30,000,000. Money could not be better spent.

Our Canadian friends, by the way, are included among "Americans" that know how to invest in good securities.

The biggest stockholders of record in the American Telegraph & Telephone Co. is Sun Life Insurance Co. of Canada. If you do not think that is wise investing, you're mistaken.

The Cheshire cat in the "Alice" story, gradually disappeared, until the smile was left.

Railroad labor is pending in the same direction, soon to disappear, all except the payroll.

Unions demand a 6-hour day and a 5-day week.

There are limits to the speed of progress, you cannot go upstairs a whole flight at a time.

But the suggestion of the union, which shocks railroad owners now, will be reality before long, if prosperity continues.

The 5-day week, giving men a day in which to spend what they earn, is a good idea. Some big industries are testing it satisfactorily. Our wealth is small outside of what the workers earn and the factories produce.

Sixty billions is the annual payroll, 15 billions more than it costs the workers to live. That surplus of $15,000,000,000 requires careful attention for the good of the country.

Five days to work, one day to spend and enjoy, would be a good American program.

Railroad workers say they are entitled to part of the extra price paid for improved machinery, and that is true. Last Wednesday, the Baltimore & Ohio locomotive, President Pierce, broke the record, hauling a fast passenger train from Chicago to Washington. Four engines, in relays, are needed for that run ordinarily. Until three years ago, five were needed.

Men should earn more and have more leisure when the machinery they manage produces more. A woman running a sewing machine should get better pay than her grandmother who pushed a needle and thread.

Besides, the more the workers get, the greater the general prosperity. Let powerful men remember that for their comfort. If they doubt it, let them try to accumulate $100,000,000 in China, where men work for 25 cents a day.

The steel industry expects biggest year in 1929. And copper men are cheerful, with copper at 24 cents a pound.

That will cost the big power concerns alone, $25,000,000 a year extra, for the increase in cost of raw copper.

Cotton is lower. Perhaps disorganized cotton growers might learn from well-organized copper men.

Without organization, not much is accomplished in modern business.

New York, try to wipe out diphtheria, employs many horses, producing protective antitoxins. That marvelous efficiency saves children from horrible deaths and mothers from dreadful suffering.

One horse produces every week enough serum to protect 500 children. And scientific treatment enables the horse to absorb, for serum purposes, enough of the diphtheria poisons to kill 12 horses ordinarily.

FOUR LOUISIANA CONVICTS FLEE IN PRISON CAR

One Captured After Gun
Battle and Others Are Believed Surrounded.

Two of Quartet Waiting
Trial on Charge of Killing Trusty.

BATON ROUGE, La., April 8.—(P)—A scheduled murder trial was turned into a manhunt today by the escape of four convicts from the Louisiana state penitentiary.

They made their getaway from the penitentiary receiving station early yesterday by overpowering guards and fleeing in a prison automobile. Later in the day one of them was captured after a gun battle on the main street of Magnolia, Miss., and early today the other three were reported surrounded near Magnolia by a posse.

Two of the convicts, Steven J. Beck, bank robber, and Jim Ward, burglar, were scheduled to go on trial at St. Francisville today for murdering a trusty in an attempt to escape the prison last September.

The other two were Adam Webster, serving a sentence for breaking and entering, who was captured, and Fren Wilson, purse snatcher. All were sentenced from New Orleans.

Break Into Gun Case.
While the other convicts were sitting down for breakfast the quartet made their break for freedom. Covering an office boy and a trusty with a revolver they broke into a gun case and obtained a rifle, one or more shotguns and ammunition.

Obtain a key to the gate from the trusty's pocket the men made their way outside the prison grounds where they overpowered a lookout guard, relieved him of his gun, leaped into a prison automobile and fled.

Sheriff Thad Elizey of Pike county, Mississippi, was notified that the convicts were headed in the direction of Magnolia and he and a deputy set out to track them.

Dashing into Magnolia the convicts stopped their car in front of the postoffice and all four opened fire on the sheriff and deputy who appeared in half a block away.

Trio Abandon Car.
After more than 100 shots had been exchanged without damage, the convicts fled through a yard and three of them commandeered the automobile of a passing motorist and sped away. The car was found abandoned several miles away and the trio were thought to have taken to the woods.

Webster was found crouched down beneath some shrubbery in the yard. He gave up his pistol without resistance and was lodged in the county jail.

DEAD WOMAN IS FOUND IN AUTO

Fingerprints on Steering Wheel May Give Clue
to Slayer.

NEW YORK, April 8.—(P)—Fingerprints on the steering wheel of a stolen automobile were clues police had today in a search for the slayer of a woman whose body was found in the car.

The victim was identified as Mrs. Linda Begins, 35 years old, mother of three children.

The crime was discovered yesterday after a group of women informed Lieutenant Arthur Coy of the fire department that they thought a woman in a car parked in West Thirty-sixth street was dead. Coy investigated and notified police.

The body bore marks of violence and indications that the victim had been strangled.

Detectives ascertained that the automobile was owned by Miss Ernestine Durr of the Bronx and had been stolen from her mother, Godfrey Durr, Saturday night.

CONFESSES TO 100 ROBBERIES

Los Angeles "Jewelry
Broker" Arrested; Claims
Stole $300,000.

LOS ANGELES, April 8.—(P)—The confession of Walter M. Deutsch that he had gleaned more than $300,000 worth of valuables in 100 burglaries during the last six years was being checked here today by police.

The confession, made public by police detectives after Deutsch's arrest, declared that he had burglarized the home of many motion picture actors, including those of Jackie Coogan and Jack Pickford.

About $80,000 worth of jewels were said to have been taken by Deutsch from the Coogan and Pickford homes.

Diamonds and jewelry worth about $5,000 were recovered from a sewer at Deutsch's home when he was arrested.

Deutsch declared he had operated as a jewelry broker by day and a jewelry burglar by night. A burglary charge has been filed against him.

Eight Lives Taken In Ontario Storms

TORONTO, Ont., April 8.—(P)—Eight persons were killed and damage estimated in excess of $1,000,000 was done by storms sweeping across Ontario during the weekend. Rail and highway traffic was paralyzed and several communities were isolated by floods, which carried out bridges and undermined tracks.

At Galt four feet of water rose in the principal streets, and power, telephone and telegraph lines were down. The breaking of power dams enforced the closing of factories in a number of towns.

"REVOLUTION" NIPPED MANILA

Filipinos Planned to Sell
"Commissions" in Fake
"Army."

MANILA, April 8.—(P)—Sixteen Filipinos were under arrest today charged with planning a "grand revolutionary army" to overthrow the present government and substitute an independent administration.

Police, however, say the scheme was not serious in its intent and that it probably would have gone little further than the swindling of a number of natives into purchasing officers' commissions in the "revolution."

A raid yesterday netted twenty-one men and a large quantity of literature, bolos and daggers. Five of those arrested are being held as witnesses. They revealed that the leaders had set prices for ranks in the "army," the price decreased with the lessening of importance of the post. Under the plan a colonel's title would cost a prospective officer 480 pesos (about $240), a lieutenant colonel 380 pesos and a major 280.

Revolutionary pamphlets asserting that Japan would send its navy and supply arms to help the cause were found. This the constabulary branded as slander against Japan. The pamphlets also revealed an elaborate ritual which included the signing of the commission in blood of the purchaser. In spite of the alleged swindle motive, police say the "revolutionaries" must stand trial for sedition.

Their object was to swindle," said Col. C. H. Bowers, chief of the intelligence unit, "but their acts were seditious."

He said that the organization was confined to Manila and that he doubted that it had a membership any larger than those arrested because police had nipped the plot in the bud.

Burns, sustained March 28, when he backed away from a window and fell into a pan of boiling water with which his mother was scrubbing a floor, resulted in the death Sunday afternoon of Wesley Raymond Donahoo, one year and eight months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul R. Donahoo, 2645 North Forty-fourth street.

Wesley had been playing at a window and without looking behind him, he backed away, slipped and fell into the hot water before his mother could grasp him. A toxic condition developed which proved fatal Sunday afternoon.

Chapter IV.
Their smiles, which made tired business men exclaim, "Jolly little ladies! Why couldn't I have married one like them?" and tired business women think "I wish to heaven I'd educated my feet instead of my head!" were as much a part of their act as the wags of black and gold or the mascara.

They smiled without knowing that they did so and danced as they'd have walked, thinking of something else.

Ginger, leaning in Chatka, murmured under that fixed smile, "Second row center, Chat. Looks like hard, if you ask me. Better grab him, ole dear; he'd be a great help."

Chatka turned the dazzle of her smile toward second row center, but her action was purely mechanical. She liked Alban; she had felt a keen, friendly bond between them from the moment he caught her eye on the grandstand and bowed in such an understanding way.

But she would form no association for the sake of her career. She wanted the things success would bring: a comfortable home, pretty clothes, some luxury here and there; ease for the gentle, frail mother; a definite place in the world—that sense of respectability mama had forfeited when she married, and which for all his love for them, Jock Mason never had been able to give his wife and little daughter.

Chatka wanted these with an ache that never was still, but just as set as her determination to give them. It was also the resolve that she would win them by hard work and ability. Just how Ginger regarded such things she was not sure; sometimes she suspected that her petite friend would allow nothing to stand in the way of progress.

But even if one had no feeling about cutting corners, it seemed so darn unsportsmanlike. "Too easy, too cheap, too much of a sure thing," Jock Mason's daughter, all right. She smiled again when she thought of the gambling instinct so deep within her that it would demand the elements of chance even when her future was the stake. And the girls said she was afraid to bet on a horse race!

The number ended with a crash from the orchestra and the beauty chorus trotted up the iron stairs to the dressing room, where they skinned off the black and gold, substituting still more abbreviated aprons of pink georgette.

Chatka and Vee, coming together in the wings, brushed by a strikingly handsome young woman who glanced at them in a weary, preoccupied way and then went on watching the stage, shrinking into herself as if in anxiety or fear.

"This was the featured player in 'Day Dreams,'" Jo Hendrickson, not quite a star, but looking forward to her name in lights next season. And now the news was beginning to sift through the company that all this was changed.

"Believe me, I'd hate to be in her shoes," Ginger whispered, coming up with a shrewd look at her beautiful, set face. "Tough going for her, now she's got to get down to work after taking it easy so long."

"What happened about Ross?" Vee wanted to know.
"What always happens, stupid? Jo had the stuff; she could make you laugh, cry—anything. But it wasn't that Ross fell for; it was her gorgeous looks. And I suppose she thought it would be a chance to get over—well, anyway two irons in the fire were too many. I suppose, she got sort of lazy, like most of 'em do, and let her job slide a little. Then she let herself start getting fat. And now our friend Jay Ross is all through and the show is closing in a week and Jo is out of luck. Rotten break, all right, but she's got herself to blame. . . . It'll be Alban who pays and pays and p-pays tonight, ole darling; there's absolutely nothing between my stomach and backbone!"

Chatka laughed but her thought was with of Hendrickson. Another reason for winning out on your own; "angles" were plenty likely to change color and develop cloven feet.

A girl who played Jo's game might rise in a swift, upward rush, have a part of success, but usually she dropped suddenly and hard like an elevator gone wrong.

It was good business to be what Broadway grinningly called a "good girl." Broadway needn't grin, either; it was good business and good sense.

A girl who believed in her own ability enough not to be tempted by the other thing, and who worked hard and learned what she could and kept awake all the time would meet her chance one day. Be ready to grab it then; that was the important thing.

This star was running through her mind when she told Alban what she wanted.

They were in the gayest and gaudiest and most outrageously glittering of all the Broadway night clubs, in a private room which was not private at all since it was separated from the main floor by a glass partition on which Ginger declared made her fee, as if she were in a show case.

Practically all of the beauty chorus had assisted in draping Chatka in one of the flame-colored Spanish shawls they wore in their last number, since she had no evening gown. It turned her arms and shoulders to white velvet and put mysterious depths in her dark eyes, and when Vee had brushed her hair straight back and hung a pair of property earrings at her ears, Ginger grumbled that no one else would stand any show.

"If ever you had the right clothes you'd be a knockout, Chat. You look like Cleopatra's dearest rival." But Alban, said she looked like a Park avenue Carmen. "I'd like to take you to Paris, Chatka. They worship beauty over there, especially the French of the old regime. I've a friend in whose home I have met the most beautiful women in the world—or so I thought until tonight. He hesitated, black eyes serious. "They're luxurious ladies; they wouldn't know how to toil or spin."

Wine had appeared on the table as if by magic. Vee was laughing too much and the man they called Alba was making love to her in a rather belligerent way. Couldn't carry liquor for all his courtly manner, Chatka reflected, and wondered if Alban's interest in herself was due to the glass or two he had drunk of what Vee called "giggle water."

She barely had touched her own but that one taste, together with a sort of barbaric frenzy which seemed in the very air of the place, struck goodness through her.

"Pooh!" she cried. "Who wants to be that kind of lily? No fun blooming under glass. This lily would rather toil like the dickens and blossom in green and yellow light bulbs, with all Broadway looking on. You think that a quaint notion, Mr. Man?"

He leaned toward her and spoke in a low, oddly vibrant voice. "You wish to be a star, Chatka? I would like that for you. I would like to see that what you want." Copyright, 1929, King Features Syndicate, Incorporated. (To Be Continued.)

NO SPECTACULAR DRIVE ON LIQUOR

Mitchell Says Dry Campaign to Be a Long Steady One.

Prohibition Force Opposed to Any Violence by U. S. Agents.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(U. P.)—Plans of the Hoover administration for more effective organization of federal law enforcement agencies were reviewed Saturday night in a radio address by Attorney General Mitchell.

Emphasizing that nothing in the nature of a spectacular "drive" is intended by the administration, Mitchell said the progress sought must be gained by steady, earnest and persistent efforts over weeks, months or even years.

He reiterated the administration's intention to countenance no violence or violations of civil liberties by federal enforcement agents. His remarks were the first formal enunciation of this administration's policy.

What? . . . shr shr hrd hrd shr
"Detection and punishment of crime must be effected by strictly lawful methods. Nothing has a greater tendency to breed lawlessness than lawless methods of law enforcement. The greater the difficulties of detecting and punishing crime, the greater the temptation to place a strain on construction of statutes to supply what may be thought to be more efficient means of enforcing law. The statutory and constitutional rights of all persons must be regarded, and their violation, in advertent or otherwise, is to be avoided."

Points Out States' Duty.
Under this country's system of government, Mitchell said, a large share of power and duty to prevent and punish crime rests with the states. The field of the federal government, he pointed out, is limited. Referring to the national investigation of the district attorney's offices recently announced by the justice department, Mitchell said this study was undertaken with the purpose of improving personnel and "weeding out inefficiency and ineffectiveness."

"We shall direct our efforts," he added, "without ceasing to bring about the selection and retention of proper men for these posts. We are also reviewing condition throughout the country of ascertain where and to what extent the forces available to the United States attorneys to assist them in their work are adequate."

Describing the law enforcement machinery of the United States government, Mitchell said the only immediate change contemplated is the transfer of the prohibition unit from the treasury to the justice department. This has been suggested by the president to bring about closer cooperation in collection of evidence and the prosecution of guilty persons, he said.

BOMB INTENDED FOR ROOSEVELT FOUND IN MAIL

Postoffice Porter Finds Machine and Prevents Explosion.

GOVERNOR 'GLAD NO ONE INJURED'

New Home of Executive's Daughter Goes Up In Flames.

ONLY BLACK POWDER.
NEW YORK, April 8.—(By the Associated Press.)—A bomb found in a parcel post package addressed to Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt contained only black powder, instead of dynamite, and was merely of the variety known as a "scare bomb." Bomb squad detectives announced today.

NEW YORK, April 8.—(By the Associated Press.)—Police today sought the sender of a bomb addressed to Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It was accidentally discovered by a porter in the parcel post room of the general postoffice at Thirty-third street and Eighth avenue yesterday. The infernal machine consisted of six ounces of dynamite in a six-inch length of one-inch pipe, capped at both ends and provided with a fuse and detonating device. The whole thing was encased in wax in a tin candy box wrapped in brown paper.

The detonator was a strip of sandpaper against which four matches were held by a spring in such a way that if the lid of the box were lifted the fuse would be ignited.

On the wrapper was the hand printed address: "The Hon. F. D. Roosevelt, Mansion house, Albany, N. Y." In the corner was printed "H. Bup. 459 Twenty-ninth street." Police found the name and address fictitious.

Porter Finds Bomb.
Thomas Calley of 215 Jefferson street, Hoboken, N. J., the porter, found the bomb when he accidentally hit it with his broom while sweeping the parcel post room. At the contact there was a hiss and smoke curled from the package. Calley promptly trampled upon it.

The porter's action in stepping on the bomb, police said, probably saved his life and those of the clerks at work in the room, as he broke off the fuse and extinguished the matches.

Governor Roosevelt at his home in Hyde Park expressed no alarm when told of the finding of the bomb. His only comment was that he "was glad no one was injured in discovering the bomb." Over the telephone he informed Police Commissioner Whelan that he knew of no motive for the sending of a bomb to him.

Daughter's Home Burns.
Detectives of the division of combustibles of the fire prevention bureau who examined the infernal machine with postoffice inspectors said it would probably have killed several persons had it exploded either in the postoffice or when opened in the governor's office.

No connection was evident between the bomb incident and the destruction by fire of the new $100,000 home of the governor's daughter, Mrs. C. B. Dall, adjoining the estate of John D. Rockefeller at Tarrytown, N. Y., yesterday morning.

The mansion was nearing completion and Mr. and Mrs. Dall now on their way home from Europe, were expected to occupy it in the near future.

LINDY WILL VISIT MEXICO ONCE MORE

Lone Eagle's Next Trip to See Fiancee Expected to Bring Announcement As to Date and Place of Wedding.

CUERNAVACA, Mexico, April 8.—(AP)—On Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's next trip to Mexico City—probably the last before his wedding in June—announcement probably will be made as to the date and place of his impending nuptials with Miss Anne Morrow.

It is learned here that the trans-Atlantic aviator plans one more trip to Mexico City as the guest of the Morrow family before the wedding. On the occasion of this next visit there is likely to be an embassy statement announcing when and where the wedding will take place.

Colonel Lindbergh, his fiancée, Ambassador Morrow, Mrs. Morrow and Elizabeth Morrow, attended by members of the embassy staff, spent a quiet weekend here, preparatory to return to the embassy today. Although there was no telephone at the Morrow country home the ambassador had arranged to keep in constant touch with the Mexican revolutionary situation. Little happened, however, to disturb the peace of his holiday.

The party was accompanied from Mexico City by four truck loads of soldiers, an impressive reminder of the turmoil which exists in other parts of Mexico and which might, conceivably, endanger the ambassador and his family.

HINDENBURG IS RECOVERED AFTER SERIOUS ILLNESS

BERLIN, April 8.—(AP)—The condition of President Paul von Hindenburg, who has been ill with a complication of influenza and gastric complaint, is now wholly normal, it was said at the presidential palace this morning. No bulletins will be issued, although he will remain indoors to guard against the treacherous weather.

Illness Concealed.
BERLIN, April 8.—(AP)—German officialdom successfully concealed a recent serious illness of President Paul von Hindenburg. Today the president was said to be out of danger, with no further apprehension for his recovery.

The president's illness was a complication of influenza and gastric troubles and due to his advanced age (82 years) caused considerable anxiety in government circles. It was deemed advisable, however, to withhold the news from the public so as to prevent general anxiety. This was possible since Herr von Hindenburg was able to attend the important state affairs from his sick bed.

He has not been allowed to go out of doors.

SEEK EVIDENCE IN ABDUCTIONS

A. F. L. May File Charges Against 20 Elizabeth-ton Business Men.

ELIZABETHTON, Tenn., April 8.—(AP)—A list of twenty Elizabeth-ton business men today was in the hands of labor leaders who were trying to obtain evidence that they took part in the kidnapping of two American Federation of Labor representatives with a view of instituting criminal and civil prosecution against them, promised in an address here yesterday by William Green, president of the federation.

Six other business men were under bond on charges of felonious assault on John B. Penix, a county organizer for the federation who was roused from sleep last Thursday night and ordered to leave town. An aged sister of Penix came to her brother's aid with a pistol and drove his assailants away.

Two other representatives of the labor body, Edward McCrady and Alford Hoffman, were said to have been forced to leave Elizabeth-ton the same night, however, and it is in connection with their kidnapping that the present investigation is under way.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., April 8.—(AP)—A partial walkout of operatives at the Chadwick-Hoskin Mill No. 5 at Pineville, N. C., occurred this morning following an employees' meeting last night which was addressed by Fred Erwin Beal, organizer for the national textile union and other labor organizers.

The plant started work with only a small force, while pickets were posted outside. At other plants where the employees have been urged to strike, both mill officials and workers were unwilling to talk. Conditions remained quiet at Gastonia where the first North Carolina strike was launched last week, and five national guard companies remained on duty.

AIRPLANE PARTS FIRMS TO UNITE

Merger Into $140,000,000 Company Is Being Formed In East.

NEW YORK, April 8.—(AP)—Wall street heard today that the organization of a new $140,000,000 aviation accessory corporation to unite the aviation interests of several large companies was to be announced soon. It will take the form of a holding company which will own the Bendix corporation, Stromberg Carburator Co. of America, Scintilla Magneto Co. and a new corporation now being formed to take over developments of Delco Remy, a General Motors subsidiary, making aircraft appliances.

The nucleus of the proposed organization, it is understood, will be the Bendix corporation. General Motors will hold 25 per cent of the new company's stock.

The undertaking will involve no public financing, as it is proposed to acquire the interests of the units through an exchange of stock.

Stock of the Bendix corporation will be split, the reports said, on a 2 for 1 basis, stockholders retaining one share in the present corporation and exchanging the other share for one in the new company.

The Stromberg company will be acquired on the basis of one and one-fifth shares of the new company for each share of Stromberg.

Mistake In Decimal Point Causes Death Of Three Youngsters

LONDON, April 8.—(AP)—An inquest held today into the deaths of three boys who came from Sudbury recently to be treated for ringworm, brought out that a misplaced decimal point in a prescription caused the fatalities.

The boys died after being given medicine from a prescription compounded at a hospital. The jury decided that they had died from poison accidentally administered. The testimony showed that a

Favoritism at the city hall must be stopped.

Our citizens were shocked and humiliated at the manner the city council recently handled the misuse of city funds. Dishonesty in public office must not go unpunished and the city must not compromise with wrong doing. Our municipally owned utilities were established by vote of the people and must be honestly administered for the protection of our people.

All parks should be developed but first attention should be given to close in parks easily accessible to those who most need parks.

By careful and intelligent use of city money it will be possible to save enough from the present tax levy for a new city building on North Tenth street to be built one unit at a time; also for fire barn in South Lincoln.

I favor impartial enforcement of all laws and pledge myself to that end.

Not for every room, not for every fancy, but daring enough for the most modern imagination is this Handmade Marble Inlaid Armstrong Floor. Gray and buff blocks of buff and gray are pieced by hand with marbled blocks. . . the whole effect unlike any floor you've ever been offered.

There are other modern virtues, too. . . quiet, comfort, and warmth. Hurrying footsteps are softened to mere whispers, and Armstrong's Linoleum brings you absolute freedom from drafty cracks, from a cold surface underfoot.

Beautiful when you first see it. Beautiful after years underfoot — thanks to its Accolac Process surface.

GAY songs of welcome freedom rise from the NEW Armstrong Floors that proudly wait your inspection in a spring display at local stores this week!

Freedom — for you — from stupid, dull old floors . . . that is one song from bold modern motifs, dashing color effects, prize-winning patterns.

Freedom for you, too, sing these new-type floors . . . freedom from stains, spots, after-marks of spilled things, of tracked-in mud, and the scars and scratches that make ordinary floors such a worry!

Every Armstrong pattern in this spring display wears a lovely lustrous surface produced by the Accolac Process. A special lacquer closes the pores of the linoleum — seals the surface against the grinding-in of dirt and dust. An occasional light waxing will keep this Accolac

Various Proposals Presented to Hoover by Union Officials.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(P)—Organized labor's views on revision and administration of the tariff were presented to President Hoover today by a delegation representing the American Federation of Labor.

Adoption of the American valuation principle in determining tariff schedules was urged as a more effective means of fixing duties and one which is fairer to the wage earner than the one now followed. Under this principle the price of imported commodities in American markets, rather than the cost of production abroad, is the basic factor.

The president's attention was called to the provisions of existing laws prohibiting the importation of articles manufactured by convict labor and the delegation urged that this principle be extended to bar products of foreign child labor. It was pointed out that America has placed restrictions upon child labor while the foreign manufacturer is left free to make use of juvenile employees.

The delegation also asked consideration of the law providing for the registration of trade marks under which, it said, it is possible for a manufacturer to register his trade mark in this country, produce abroad and still have the protection of the American government.

Many tariff schedules, the delegation said, have been fixed with a view to the cost of materials abroad and without taking into consideration the cost of the labor involved, as compared with the cost of labor in America. This is considered unfair to American wage earners and a change was advocated.

Chavez also was urged in the administrative provisions of the tariff laws, which would enable organized labor to present its views in cases of situations of imports, a privilege which the delegation said is not now accorded to the workers. In this connection, the delegation asked that the personnel of the tariff commission be arranged to include a representative of organized labor.

The group was led by Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, and included Michael J. Flynn, executive secretary of America's Wage Earners Protective conference; James Maloney, president of the Glass Bottle Blowers' association; Charles L. Baine, secretary of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union; and I. M. Ornburn, president of the Cigar Makers' International union.

Ray Schmandt, formerly first baseman at Brooklyn and Indianapolis, has been signed by Canton of the Central league. Schmandt was with Lincoln a dozen years ago, playing first and second.

Lincoln Girl Wins Short Story Contest

Miss Carlota Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Davis, 1437 Washington street, won first place in the annual short story contest conducted during the month of March by Chi Delta Phi, honorary literary society of Stephens college where Miss Davis is a junior student. The award carries with it a cash prize of ten dollars. Miss Davis' story, "Loyalties," will be published in the April issue of the Standard, the literary magazine of Stephens.

BORDER TROUBLE LESS ALARMING

Stimson Believes Situation Improving; Morrow Sends Report.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 8.—(P)—The situation on the Mexican border is viewed by Secretary Stimson as less alarming than it has been during the past three or four weeks. He and Secretary Good were in agreement today that the failure of the rebel attack on Naco Saturday, marked the passing of the immediate crisis.

Ambassador Morrow reported to the state department today that he had been informed that in the state of Chihuahua, Mexican federal troops have occupied Camargo and Parral. The ambassador also says it was reported at Mexico City that General Escobar, the principal leader of the rebels, had left Ciudad Juarez about noon yesterday with troop trains going in the direction of Casas Grandes, supposedly with the intention of joining the rebels in the state of Sonora.

Federal troops on the west coast have occupied Culiacan in Sinaloa, the ambassador reported, and other news received by the state department said the rebel army in Sinaloa had retreated from Culiacan to San Blas last Friday. The reports said the district through which the retreating troops passed was looted and that forced loans were levied on the people irrespective of their nationality. The citizens of Los Mochis were said to have been compelled to pay 10,000 pesos.

Nebraskan Has Long Ride for a Nickel

Passes Thirty-four Hours on New York and Covers 429 Miles That

NEW YORK, April 8.—You can travel 429 miles and thirty-four hours for a nickel in New York City, noted for its high living costs. The discovery is that of Philip M. Belswanger, a 21-year-old Nebraskan, who dropped a nickel in a coin box at the Fourteenth street station of the Seventh avenue subway at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon and emerged at the same station thirty-four hours later at midnight Saturday.

Chavez spent a day and a half on New York's underground and elevated system. Shifting his route by means of a map, he systematically rode up and down every elevated subway line in Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens, Jamaica and Bronx, never twice traveling the same route. He did not sleep. A 5-cent chocolate bar was his only food on the trip.

EXPEND QUARTER MILLION MORE ON MISSOURI RIVER

OMAHA, April 8.—(P)—Approximately $1,250,000 will be spent on the upper Missouri river during the next fiscal year, instead of the $1,000,000 previously allotted, a Washington dispatch to the World-Herald quotes C. E. Child, secretary of the chamber of commerce waterways committee. The additional sum, it was explained, is mainly an "unexpended balance."

SPEED IS URGED IN DEBT PARLEY

Experts Tired of Delay in Settling Reparations Question.

PARIS, April 8.—(P)—The experts trying to solve the reparations problem have become tired of the long drawn out parley. It is now proposed that hereafter the committee go ahead at full steam taking no more weekend holidays until a decision is reached on which a report can be drawn. The whole committee agrees that the work must lag no longer.

Reports that the Germans alone were responsible for previous delays are denied by other committee members. There are good reasons to suppose that the German experts became eager to talk business ten days ago after Owen D. Young, the chairman, laid down the principles calling for action.

The Germans, it is said, in sparring for position found the time coming when they would have been faced with the alternative of having to go on indefinitely under the present Dawes plan unless a compromise settlement could be reached.

Mr. Young, having taken the matter in hand, made known in his now famous memorandum what was expected in the way of further efforts by the experts and has since remained the guiding hand in the private talks as well as in full sessions of the committee.

Many conversations between the creditor experts and Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, the chief German delegate, have taken place in his presence, both parties seeking his advice and intervention.

Some of the experts now hope for a decision before the end of the week. After that several weeks will be required to draw up a report.

Two Fined for Speeding On State Highways

Robert Hart and Charles Thornton, both of Omaha, were each fined $10 and costs in Municipal court Monday morning on charges of speeding on state highways. The complaint was filed by State Sheriff Condit.

Sheriff Condit said that he had chased the men from Omaha to Havelock Sunday afternoon and had had his car going seventy miles an hour or over most of the time. Despite the fact that they were driving a small, powered car they managed to keep ahead of him almost to Lincoln. They both pleaded guilty to the charge.

More than a score of members spoke for or against the bill Monday forenoon. Mr. Cone, in support of his motion to give it the axe, declared that the effect of lowering the occupation tax to $5 would reduce the state's income by $131,000 annually.

Mr. Howard declared that if the present law as a hi-jacking measure taking $131,000 yearly from the coffers of corporations.

Cuts Out Double Interest

Two other senate bills met with better luck during the morning and were advanced to third reading. The house laid over eleven house proposals on general file to start work on the long list of senate bills which confront it. The measures approved for passage were:

S. P. No. 63—Deletes a provision in the present law for double interest on delinquent tax sale notices. This does not repeal what was charged, but eliminates figuring it twice, once when the delinquent list is published and again when taxes are paid.

S. P. No. 73—Regulates appointment of guardians for incompetent veterans and of minor children of disabled or deceased veterans, and for the commitment of veterans to institutions.

BAIR CLAIMS ALL CITY PARKS ARE BEING IMPROVED

Complaint that the park department is using all of its funds for the development of Pioneer park to the exclusion of improvements at Antelope, Peter Pan, Pentz and Van Dorn parks, was received by Commissioner Bair, from Clara L. Smith, Monday.

"You are being charged with giving too much attention to Pioneer park and neglecting the other parks," the letter says. "My personal observation," the writer added, "is that this is not true, but to satisfy myself I am asking you to tell me the exact situation."

"The charges are unfounded and unwarranted," Commissioner Bair declared. "It is true, he added, that Pioneer park is being developed, but no more money is being spent there than elsewhere. It also is untrue that the downtown parks are being neglected."

After pointing out that more than 2,000 trees have been set out in Antelope park this spring, Mr. Bair declared that a trip through the parks will show some of the work that has been done. Van Dorn, Stewart and the Sawyer-Snell parks and all of the other of the eighteen playgrounds have been given very careful attention, he stated.

That good old-fashioned flavor

IN DOUBT about it—old-time cooking was delicious. But it may have been your youthful appetites, rather than the quality of the food itself, that gave it that super flavor we all remember. The good cooks of those days never had a chance to buy such groceries as modern housewives use.

The coffee on your breakfast-table—one of the half-dozen best-known brands advertised today—has a flavor that you could find only at a few famous restaurants, forty years ago. The cakes that mother used to make would have been even lighter, fluffier, if she had had modern flour and shortening to work with.

Every day the advertising columns tell you where to buy and how to use cooking materials that are better-tasting, purer, more conveniently put up than ever before in history.

All through your housekeeping the same rule holds good. There are better things nowadays to eat, to wear, to use. Read the advertisements and know what they are. Then ask for them by name.

Make it a habit; reading the advertisements pays YOU.

THE CHILDREN

By EDITH WHARTON.
(Copyright, 1928, D. Appleton & Co.)

CHAPTER 20.

Mrs. Sellers' social discipline was too perfect to permit her even in emergencies to neglect her obligation for another; and after M. Dobree had been for a week at Cortina she said one day to Boyne: "But I've seen nothing lately of the little Wheaters. What's become of them?"

He assured her that they were all right, but had probably been too shy to present themselves at the chalet since Mr. Dobree's arrival, to which Mrs. Sellers replied, with the faintest hint of tartness, that she had never had occasion to suspect the little Wheaters of being shy, and that, furthermore, Mr. Dobree did not happen to be staying at the chalet.

Boyne smiled. "No; but they know he's with you a good deal and he's a more impressive figure than they are used to."

He saw that she scented irony in this, and was not wholly pleased with it. "I don't know what you mean by impressive," he said. "I don't know anything in the world could impress the modern hotel child. But Mr. Dobree is very sorry for them, poor dears, and I'm sure it would interest him to see something of them. Why shouldn't we take them all on a picnic tomorrow? I know Mr. Dobree would like to invite them."

Boyne felt that, for all the parties concerned, the undertaking might prove formidable. He pointed out that if Zinnie and the two Buondelmonte children were included in an all-day expedition, Miss Scope's presence would be necessary, since otherwise all Judith's energies would be absorbed in keeping the party in order, and Mrs. Sellers acquiesced: "Yes, the poor little things are all dreadfully spoilt."

Boyne was secretly beginning to be of the same mind; but Mrs. Sellers could no longer criticize his young friends without rousing his instinctive opposition. "They certainly have not had much opportunity to become little Lord Fauntleroy, if that is what you mean," he said impatiently; and his betrothed rejoined: "What I mean is that Mr. Dobree feels sorry for them because of the kind of opportunity they had had. You see, he was one of the lawyers in the Westway divorce."

Boyne gave her a quick look, in which he was conscious that his resentment flared. "I'm hanged if I see what there can be in Mr. Dobree's mind to make him connect the Westway divorce with the Wheaters' children."

"Why simply his knowledge of Judith's intimacy with that wretched drug-soaked Doll Westway, and his familiarity with the horrible details that led up to the girl's suicide. She and Judith were together at Deauville the very summer that she killed herself. Both their mothers had gone off heaven knows where. Judith proclaimed the fact to every one, as you know."

Boyne had removed his eyes from Mrs. Sellers' face, and was staring out at the familiar outline of the great crimson mountains beyond the balcony. A phrase of Stevenson's about "the lovely and detested scene" (from "The Ebb-tide," he thought) strayed through his mind as he gazed. It was helpful to him to even think that he might hereafter come to associate those archangelic summits with Mrs. Lullimer's smooth imperious face. And Mr. Dobree's knowledge of the inner history of the Westway divorce.

He turned back to Mrs. Sellers. "Aren't you getting rather sick of this place?" he asked abruptly. She gave back his irritated stare with one of genuine surprise. "Sick of what? You mean of Cortina?"

"Of the whole show," his sweeping gesture gathered up in one contemptuous handful the vast panorama of mountain, vale and forest. "I always feel that when scenery gets mixed up with our personal matters all the virtue goes out of it—as if our worries were so many locusts, eating everything bare."

Mrs. Sellers was silent for a moment; then her hand fell on his shoulder, and she said: "I've always been afraid, dear, that this queer responsibility you've assumed was going to end by getting on your nerves."

Boyne jumped up, drawing abruptly away from her. "Responsibility? What responsibility?" He walked across the room, turned back and awkwardly laid an answering caress on her hair. "Gammer! It's Mr. Dobree who gets on my nerves—just a little." "Hypocrite!" he cursed himself inwardly. "Fact is, I liked Cortina a damned sight better when you and I and the children had it all to ourselves. He saw the light of assurance in her averted cheek. "Just my beastly selfishness, I know—I needn't tell you that men are beastly selfish, need I?" He laughed, and her faint laugh echoed his.

Mr. Dobree is going soon, I believe," she volunteered. Boyne pulled himself together. "Well, that makes it a good deal easier to be unselfish while he's here and I take it upon myself to accept his picnic for tomorrow. I'll drop down and announce it to the children." He flattered himself that his simulation of buoyancy had produced the desired effect, and that his parting from Mrs. Sellers was unclouded. But half way down the hill he stood suddenly still in the path, and exclaimed aloud: "But after he's gone, what then?"

The picnic was beautifully successful—one of those smooth, creaseless, well-oiled successes as to which one feels that at any moment it may slip from one's hold and reveal the face of failure. A very Janus of a picnic, Boyne thought. To the chief actors, however, it presented no such quality, but was the perfect image of what constitutes a good time for the young people, when made out of the happy union of tact and money. To Mr. Dobree it was certainly that, and he was justified in feeling that if he were to order the two roomiest and most billion-tired motors obtainable, and fill them with the most succulent delicacies of a "Palace" restaurant, and are actuated through by the kindest desire to give pleasure, happiness would automatically follow.

As regards the younger members of the party, it undoubtedly did. Terry was strong enough to enjoy the long day on the heights of the hills. Miss Scope's thermometer, Blanca was impressed by the lavish fare which replaced their habitual bread and chocolate; and the small children were in the state of effervescence induced by freedom from lessons and the sense of being the central figures of the day.

And Judith—she, the younger members of the party trailed away with Miss Scope to hunt for wild strawberries while others sat pillowed in moss beside a silver waterfall. Boyne, upon agreeing to the boulder, studied the scene and meditated from behind a screen of pipe smoke. Judith, a little way off, leaned luxuriously against her mossy cushion, her head tossed aside, her head resting in the curve of an immitable arm. Her profile looked small and clear against the autumn tress of bracken turned inward by the rush of water. A live rose burned in her cheeks, darkening her eyebrows and lashes, and putting a velvet shadow under her closed lids. She had fallen asleep, and sleep surprised her unguarded to her watchers.

"She looks almost grown up—she looks kissable. Why should she, all of a sudden?" Boyne asked himself, suddenly disturbed, not by increased pretentiousness (the measure of that varied from hour to hour) but by some new quality in it. He turned his eyes away, and they fell on Mr. Dobree, who sat facing him in the studied abandon of a picnicer unused to picnics. Mr. Dobree's inexhaustible wardrobe had supplied him with just the slightly shabby brown suit and slightly faded hat adapted to the occasion; and Boyne wondered whether it were this change of dress which made him also seem different. But no; the difference was deeper. Despite his old country clothes, Mr. Dobree did not look easier or less urban; he merely looked more excited and off his guard. His clear, cautious eyes had grown blurred and furtive; one could almost see a faint line stretching from them to the recumbent Judith. Along that line it was manifest that Mr. Dobree's thoughts were racing; and Boyne knew they were the same thoughts as his own. The discovery shocked him indescribably. But he remembered that the leveling tendencies of modern life have leveled differences of age, with the result, and that Mr. Dobree was, to all intents and purposes, but little older than himself. Moreover, he was still brisk and muscular; his glance was habitually alert, in spite of his silver hair there seemed no reason why he should not share with Boyne the contemplation of Judith's defenceless beauty.

But if this was Boyne's conclusion it was apparently not Mr. Dobree's.

But he remembered that the leveling tendencies of modern life have leveled differences of age, with the result, and that Mr. Dobree was, to all intents and purposes, but little older than himself. Moreover, he was still brisk and muscular; his glance was habitually alert, in spite of his silver hair there seemed no reason why he should not share with Boyne the contemplation of Judith's defenceless beauty.

But if this was Boyne's conclusion it was apparently not Mr. Dobree's.

As Boyne continued to observe him, Mr. Dobree's habitual pinkness had turned to a red which suffused even his temples and eyelids, so that his carefully brushed white hair looked like a sunlit cloud against an angry sky. But with whom was Mr. Dobree angry? Why, with himself, manifestly. His eyes still rested on the dreaming Judith; but the rest of his face looked as if every muscle were tightened in the effort to pull the eyes away. His frustration and his frightfulness at himself. Boyne thought, calling to mind—with a faint recoil from the reminder that he also, once or twice, had been vaguely afraid of himself when he had looked too long at Judith. Had his eyes been stretched in the effort to detach the eyes? The thing was not pleasant to visualize; and he smiled Mr. Dobree the more for serving as mirror.

But suddenly Mr. Dobree was on his feet, his whole attention given to Mrs. Sellers. Again Boyne followed him to the chalet, to the start, Mrs. Sellers—but then she had been there all the time! Shadowed by her spreading hair, her light body bedded in the turf, she looked almost as young and sylph as Judith. But somehow she had been merged in the landscape, all broken up into a dapple of sun and shade, of murmurs and sighs; her way fitting into things sometimes had this effect of effacing her. She lifted her head, and in the shade of the hat-brim Boyne caught a delicate watchfulness of brows and lips as if they were live things under a protecting leaf.

Mr. Dobree was challenging her jauntily. "Do you see why those young cannibals should monopolize all the wild strawberries? Suppose we leave Mr. Boyne to mount guard over the sleeping beauty, and try to bag our share before it's too late."

The words said clearly enough. "Take it away—it's high time," and Mrs. Sellers' gay little answer: "Come on—I'll show you a patch they'll never find," seemed to declare as clearly: "I know; but I'll see that you don't come to any mischief."

She was on her feet before his hands could help her up; something light and bounding in her seemed to spring to his call. "This way this way," she cried, striding ahead of him up the boulder-strewn way. Boyne heard their voices mounting the streamside, mingling with the noise of the water falling and flashing out again like the glimpses of her dress through the beech-leaves. He lay without moving, watching the smoke of his pipe rise in wavering spirals, twisted out of shape by puffs of air from the waterfall.

With Mr. Dobree's withdrawal the ideas suggested by his presence had gone too; Judith Wheeler seemed once more a little girl. Though perplexities and uncertainties still lingered on the verge of Boyne's mind his central self was anchored in a deep circle of peace, every fibre of him was alive to the exquisite moment; but he had no need to fly from it, no fear of its flying from him. Judith's sleep was a calm pool in which he rested.

He fancied he must have been watching her for a long time, his thoughts enclosing her in a sort of calm fraternal vigilance, when she opened her eyes and turned them on him, still drowsy with sleep. "Martin!" she called him drowsily; then, fully awake, she sat up and exclaimed: "Darling, when are you going to be married? I've positively got to know at once."

She was always startling Boyne but she had perhaps never startled him more than by this question; for even as she spoke he had been half unconsciously putting it to himself. He remembered, as something already ready far off, picturesque and unreal as a youthful folly, his resentment at Mrs. Sellers' delay in fixing a date for their marriage. Was it only two or three weeks ago that he had sent her, with a basket of gentians picked on a lofty upland, a quotation from Marvell's "Coy Mistress"? Now all that seemed an undergraduate's inattention. She had taught him that they were very well as they were, and if he still asked himself when they were to be married, the question had imperceptibly taken another form. "What in God's name were the children after we were married?" Was the way he now instinctively put it.

He too sat up, and gazed into Judith's sleepy eyes. As he did so he was aware that an uncomfortable redness (which did not, he hoped, resemble Mr. Dobree's) was creeping up to his temples.

"When I'm going to be married? Why? What's the odds. I don't know that it's anybody's business, anyhow," he grumbled in an ill-assured voice.

Judith brushed the rebuff aside. "Oh, but it is—it's mine. For a very particular reason," she continued, as if affectionately resolved to break down the barrier of his reserve.

"A reason? Nonsense! What has a chit like you got to do with reasons?"

"You mean I'm so unreasonable? A quick shadow crossed her face. "I don't really mean that?"

"I didn't mean anything at all—any more than you do. I only mean, why aren't we very well as we are?"

Her eyes grew wide at this, and continued to fix him with a half mocking gravity, while her lips were rounded into a smile. "Oh, but, Martin dear, it's Mrs. Sellers who ought to say that—not you!"

Boyne burst out laughing. How could one ever get serious for two minutes with any of these preposterous children? And once more he told himself that Judith was as preposterous, and as much of a child, as the youngest of them.

"You know, darling, you ought to be empress, impatient, passionate," she adjured him, as if his very life depended on his following her advice.

He leaned on his elbow and examined her with deliberation. "Well of all the cheek—!"

She shook her head, still smiling. "I'm not cheeky; I'm really not. But sometimes you ought to strike me as having so little experience—!"

"Thank you," Boyne interjected. "Oh, I mean in those sorts of ways. As if you'd lived all your life so far away from the world."

"From your world? So I have, thank heaven." After a moment he added with severity: "So has Mrs. Sellers—thank heaven too!"

The girl stood up, and crossing the mossy space between them, dropped down beside him and laid her hand on his arm. "Now I've offended you. Doll Westway always said I had no tact. And all I wanted was to explain why I have to know as soon as possible when you're to be married."

"Well, you certainly haven't explained that," Boyne answered, turning away from her to re-light his pipe.

"No; but I'm going to. And you'll be pleased. It's because we've all clucked together—even the steps and Scope have—to give you a really jolly wedding present; and I think you'll like what we've found. We unearthed it the other day at Toblach, at the antiquaire's. And we want to know exactly the right moment to give it to you. You do love presents, don't you, Martin?" she urged as if straining her utmost to reach some human chord in him. He met the question with another laugh.

"Love presents? I should think I did! Almost as much as you do. She coloured a little at the insinuation; and perceiving this, he hastened on: "It's awfully dear of you all, and I'm ever so grateful. But there was no need to be in such a devil of a hurry."

Her face became all sympathy and intercession. "Oh, Martin, you don't mean—things haven't gone wrong, have they?" Her look and intonation showed that she would have been genuinely distressed if they had. A pang like neuralgia shot through Boyne—yet a pang that was not all bitter. He took her hand, and what she had once called a "grown up kiss" on it. "Of course not, dear. And thank you—thank you for everything. Whatever you've all chosen for me I shall love. . . . Only you know, there's really no sort of hurry."

She met this in silence, as something manifestly final. Folding her arms behind her, she let her head sink back on them. He saw her gaze wandered lazily skyward through the flicker of boughs.

Boyne had got his pipe going once more. Gradually the tumult in his mind subsided. He sat back lazily at her side, tilting his hat over his brows, and saying to himself: "What on earth's the use of thinking ahead, anyhow?"

But in the time of his vision, Judith's sandalled feet lay in a bed of bracken, crossed like a resting Mercury's. He could almost see the little tufted wings at the heels. For the moment his imagination was imprisoned in a circle close about them.

Cardinal O'Connell of Boston Denounces Einstein Theory As 'Ghastly Apparition of Atheism'

BOSTON, April 8.—(AP)—William Cardinal O'Connell, dean of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in the United States, believes that behind the Einstein theory of space and time there lurks the "ghastly apparition of atheism."

The cardinal so expressed himself yesterday in a communion breakfast address before the New England province of Catholic clubs of America in which he stressed the necessity of religious faith and assailed the "pseudo-intellectuals."

After condemning "petty, be-fogged professors" who have set up some new standard "to attract attention to themselves," the cardinal turned directly to the subject of the Einstein theory.

"Why do men and women who pretend to be intellectual forget the rudiments of life?" he asked. "What does all this worked up enthusiasm about Einstein mean? It is evidently worked-up, fictitious enthusiasm because I have never yet seen a man who understood in the least what Einstein is driving at; and I have been so much impressed by this fact that I very seriously doubt that Einstein himself knows really what he is driving at."

Truth Always Clear.

"Truth is always very clear when seen with a clear eye. The fact that this doubt cannot be enunciated and only succeeds in befogging the mind is patent proof that it is not really truth."

"Now, I have my own ideas about the so-called theories of Einstein, with his relativity and his utterly befogged notions about space and time. It seems nothing short of an attempt at muddying the waters without perceiving the drift. Innocent students are led away into a realm of speculative thought, the sole basis of which, so far as I can see, is to produce a universal doubt about God and his creation."

"I mean that while I do not wish to accuse Einstein at present of deliberately wishing to destroy the Christian faith and the Christian basis of life, I half suspect that if we wait a little longer he unquestionably will reveal himself in this attitude. In a word, the outcome of this doubt cannot be befogged speculation about time and space is a cloak beneath which lies the ghastly apparition of atheism."

"Europe has an old civilization and is used to the sudden appearance of fantastic philosophers. They gain very little credit among European minds unless they have something really solid and provable to reveal, but we all know that one of the weaknesses of the American public is to run after novelties which have nothing in them but their newness."

"The American student body is very often misled into false channels of knowledge by the sudden appearance of these glittering meteors who from time to time shoot across the horizon. And then it seems that there is some sort of an unorganized clique that boosts these sudden apparitions and as quickly disallows them and forgets them."

"Now for the moment it is Einstein. Nobody knows what he is trying to reveal, but in a certain sense that adds mystery to his name, and the intellectual world, while puzzled, is almost ready to applaud, but in a short time it will be perfectly clear that Einstein's day has come and gone and then no doubt, there will be some one else who for the moment will gain the applause of the clique and he will be boosted as the greatest philosopher of modern times."

Einstein Uninterested.

BERLIN, April 8.—(AP)—Prof. Albert Einstein today said Cardinal O'Connell's assertion that his theories of space and time had behind them the "ghastly apparition of atheism," left him cold and uninterested.

He said he was wholly disinclined to enter into a controversy with the cardinal.

MAN-MADE LAKES.

It is an ambitious project which prominent Kansas City capitalists have nursed along carefully.

Fifteen hundred miles from the Atlantic or Pacific seaboard—hundreds of miles from natural great bodies of water—Kansas City decided to build her own lakes. That was more than a year ago. Now the work has progressed sufficiently that two of the largest artificial lakes are nearing completion and a score of smaller ones have been finished.

Lakes will give Kansas City the finishing picturesque touch of beauty which nature omitted. It is situated in the heart of a rough, rolling, rugged hilly country. Its bluffs are clothed with most magnificent specimens of trees and broken in interesting fashion by enchanting valleys. All that was missing was sylvan lakes, to furnish the sharp contrast of crystal waters with the deep green of woods and earth.

The largest of the artificial lakes which Kansas City has projected is Lotawana, which will stretch for more than five miles between forest grown hills and between 600 and 700 acres in area. The 25-mile drive which will curve about the shoreline encircling the lake will provide Kansas City with a boulevard of unrivaled beauty. The site selected for Lotawana is one of the wildest spots in Jackson county although it opens on the backyard of the city. Parts of it are inaccessible even on foot. The land has little value intrinsically. It has been necessary to raise a natural forest which covered the low places in the valley; build a dam across the draw which will form a bowl capable of holding 4,000 million gallons of water.

The Quivers lakes called for utilization of 4,000 acres of land located two miles southwest of the Union station in Kansas City. The largest one, which has been completed, contains 2,000 million gallons of water. It is in a lovely setting, between upland slopes, upon which are beautiful apple orchards and vineyards. Much of the land is too rough for either agricultural or horticultural purposes and is covered with virgin timber.

Kansas City has much to be thankful for that public spirited citizens have taken the initiative to provide her with lakes. As a playground, the parks around Kansas City will be without a rival in America. Nature was generous in providing them with beauty; all they lacked were lakes. Now before the hundreds of thousands who live and will live in Kansas City there is opening an opportunity for the winter sports which annually attract millions of people to the lake region of the north. Before many years it is to be expected that Kansas City people will build cottages along the shorelines of these lakes and will maintain summer homes.

There are unlimited opportunities to correct nature's oversight in Nebraska. Except for the sandhills there are no lakes in this state worthy of mention. But there are scores of sites, where for the expenditure of modest sums of money, surplus waters during the spring and fall seasons, could be imprisoned to provide lakes for Nebraskans.

CAPONE CAN'T SPEND HIS MONEY.

Al Capone, the Chicago gangster, who is now seeking culture and fresh air on a palatial estate in Florida, opened up his purse and handed the Community chest of Miami, a check for $1,000.

Capone made his money in the liquor business as a beer racketeer.

The check was sent back.
Enterprising publishers should have the check photographed. It is probably the first instance on record where money was returned. In the midst of his art treasures and his bubbling fountains, Capone is probably scratching his head. It certainly is a pretty "howdy do" when a feller can't spend his money.

THE END OF AN UNWISE PROJECT.

By its action Saturday, indefinitely postponing the bill for an amendment to the constitution of Nebraska transferring two state institutions from the board of control to the university regents, the lower branch of the legislature put its foot down on a foolish and illogical proposal and spared the people of this state a recurrence of unnecessary agitation whose effect would be to injure the institutions affected, rather than to benefit them.

No general demand has been heard from over the state for a change in their management. No complaint is heard that their needs have not been taken care of by the board of control within the means provided by the legislature. There is no evidence or good reason to suppose that the board of regents of the university could look after them or provide for them any better than the board of control, if at all.

The regents have no buying or supervising organization, such as the other board maintains for a group of 17 state institutions; and, besides, they have their hands full in administering the university and its branches. Higher education is a distinct and different line of work from special training in the lower grades for children who are defective in one of their physical senses.

Two years ago, in response to the clamor of a small group of persons, the legislature submitted the same proposition to a popular vote. In the heat of a stirring presidential campaign, when state officers, congressmen and a United States senator, and members of the legislature were also to be elected, this question was given little or no attention; but a great many voters indignantly marked a cross in the "yes" square following it, without knowing what they were voting for. In that way the proposal received more affirmative votes than those cast in opposition, though not a majority of all votes cast at the election.

Because it had not been officially published in newspapers as the constitution requires, so that the people would have it brought to their notice before election, the amendment was declared invalid by the supreme court. That inadvertent omission by the secretary of state turned out to be a blessing in disguise.

The legislature's decision against repeating the folly of two years ago will not be relished by the little group of critics who wished to encumber the ballot again with their ill-advised scheme; but the general body of Nebraska's citizenship will heartily endorse the action taken.

Meanwhile, the state will continue its facilities for the education and care of deaf and blind children. In the absence of any showing of mismanagement, mistreatment or neglect of the children, or some other serious fault in the operation of the Omaha and Nebraska City institutions, the people of Nebraska will be satisfied to leave them in the board of control's charge.

CONCERNING ARBOR DAY.

Nebraska is a comparatively young state with few traditions but it has one which it should be most vigilant in observing.

That tradition is the holiday which originated in Nebraska and is now celebrated in every state in the Union and in nearly every civilized country in the world. Every Nebraskan knows that J. Sterling Morton of Nebraska City, an outstanding pioneer who served on Cleveland's cabinet, was the founder of Arbor day. The holiday was first instituted in this state in 1872. Since then its spread has been rapid until Arbor day is now world-wide in its observance.

There is danger that in observing "Tree Planting and Landscape Beautification week," as Nebraska will do from April 15 to April 22, the significance of Arbor day will be diminished rather than increased. Therefore the people of the state should take the initiative in seeing that the principal observance of this week comes on April 22, Arbor day.

The laudable idea in mind in the "week" idea probably is that the longer observance will result in the planting of more trees.

Everyone recognizes that tree planting cannot be of much value if confined to a single day. But the same fact holds true in regard to a week. Trees must be planted throughout the entire year.

The purpose of Arbor day and of the "Tree Planting and Landscape Beautification Week" is to emphasize the importance and value of planting trees, shrubs, vines and flowers and to give official recognition to the work. The public is asked "to consider thoughtfully and constructively" the needs in this field. How many people are going to ponder the problem for an entire week?

Patriotism is a sentiment presumed to exist for more than one day out of 365 but who wants to observe "Celebration of Independence and Cultivation of Patriotism" week? No thanks, Independence day on July 4, is enough for one year. Pious devotion also is more enduring than twenty-four hours a year but one Mother's day suffices. How much more forceful are Memorial, Labor, Armistice and Thanksgiving days than would be seven days of luke warm observance.

The titles alone—Arbor day and "Tree Planting and Landscape Beautification week"—express the relative strength of the ideas. The "plant trees" idea loses much of its strength when dissipated over an entire week. Therefore, although we have the week with us this year, schools and other groups planning observances, would do well to confine them largely to the one day—Nebraska's own holiday.

PERSHING AS AMBASSADOR.

It would be a splendid act of appreciation of distinguished service if General Pershing were to receive the appointment as ambassador to France succeeding the late Myron Herrick, whose death occurred a week ago.

With the possible exception of the British ambassadorship, there is no post in the American consular service more highly coveted than that of representing the American government in Paris. The close ties which have bound France and the United States for so many years naturally make it of supreme importance. During and since the World war these ties have been drawn more closely. Ambassador Herrick was held in great affection by the French people. His work in their behalf was of such a character that he caught their imagination, with the result that he was credited with possessing more influence with the French government than any other foreign representative. Much the same thing could be said of General Pershing. He is held in equally high esteem and veneration by the French nation because, as commander in chief of the American armies, he came to their rescue when the outlook was dark and foreboding.

There are troublesome and irritating questions to be adjusted between America and France. They arise out of the matter of reparations and debt payments. France has consistently held to the position that Uncle Sam should collect the French portion of the German reparations and apply it to the debt which France owes the United States. Neither Mr. Coolidge, nor Mr. Hoover care to place Uncle Sam in the role of a collector. They have insisted that France must arrange for the payment of reparations which she claims from Germany and in turn fund her debt to the United States. It has been the American position that the two matters are separate and independent.

General Pershing is not a novice in the field of diplomacy. His military service has peculiarly fitted him for such a post. He was commissioned by President Coolidge to go to South America to assist in unraveling the delicate Tacna-Arica boundary dispute and was conspicuously successful in averting war between rival claimants. He would be a splendid selection to represent America at Paris.

ARMY DISCIPLINE.

In the matter of discipline the army plays no favorites.

There was "Red" Cagle, whose thrilling exploits on the gridiron had endeared him to the entire cadet body. Cagle was guilty of infractions of West Point rules recently in remaining away from West Point during a brief visit to New York City for a longer period than covered by his "leave." As a matter of fact it was not his fault. He got caught in one of the traditional traffic jams for which Gotham is noted and arrived at the ferry to take his boat up the Hudson a minute after the ship had pulled out.

But football hero or not, Cagle got a taste of what the army demands of the soldier. He will have to parade at attention for sixty hours for failure to arrive at the barracks at the appointed hour. He can speak to no one while he is doing duty. His punishment will consume the greater part of his Saturdays during the spring months when the baseball field, and track are beckoning to those athletically inclined, and when the country surrounding West Point is most beautiful. Stupid turn of luck for one of the leading backfield stars of the 1928 football season but we'll gamble that Cagle will take it like a man, and will do his penance in the same fine spirit that he has revealed in athletic contests.

One of the most valuable lessons which the athlete acquires is in discipline. He comes to know that he must subordinate himself to the needs of the team.

Homely Philosophy.

WHO DOES THE EXTRAVAGANT SPENDING AT YOUR HOUSE, YOU OR YOUR FAMILY?

What is the use of worrying about your debts while at the same time you go on without cutting your expenses? You are dissatisfied if you cannot have and do as your companions; so you complain at the expenditures of your family and continue to spend as you did before.

You insist upon the family keeping up appearances but you grumble about the monthly bills. You scold certain members of the family for contracting debts and then you incur debts far more necessary than those you object to.

In short you want the saving and the self denial from all but yourself.

Knowing your carelessness in expenditures of course the family exhibits the same spirit and that is not surprising.

If you want to impress the family with economy measures then you must set an example for them to copy and you would be surprised if you knew what they think about your selfishness.

And don't try to make yourself believe they don't think about it.

Everyday Questions

Answered By
DR. S. PARKES CADMAN
(Copyright, 1929, New York Tribune.)

Questions from Lincoln Star readers are answered daily by the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, of the Federated Council of Churches of Christ in America. Dr. Cadman seeks to answer inquiries that appear to be representative of the trends of thought in the many letters which he receives.

QUESTION.

Portland, Me.
Is it true that great men are made more real to us by exposing their faults? Why then should we resent the writers who do this? It may be unpleasant to do it, but is it not essential? As a college man, I am studying biography and am deeply interested in it. But I want the facts, don't you?

ANSWER.

I have no particular objection to this and I feel that you, like the men and women who have made history have also shown by their flaws, weaknesses and even absurdities, that they were of the earth, earthy. What is more, since it is human to err, they are frequently the more acceptable to us because of their shortcomings.

Newton wasted golden moments in apocryphal expositions. Burns tarried too long at his cups. Washington was decidedly of as well as superior to his age, and as the late Senator Beveridge emphasizes, Lincoln's genius and policies were slowly molded by his chequered circumstances. All these things we ought clearly to understand. But vilifications, sour appraisals and the pessimistic content of the present generation because it proclaims as an ideal the incurable evil of mankind, have defiled much modern biography. It is one thing to point out a man's faults, it is quite a different thing to paint a huge and repulsive wart and then say: "This is the real Cromwell." I leave the issue to your judgment.

QUESTION.

New York City.
Is not the intellectual part of religion a private affair between every man and his Maker, in which no third party has any right to interfere; the practical object of all religion consisting in our doing good to others?

ANSWER.

Because man is a unit his personality cannot be dissected into separate and distinct entities which have no relation with each other, nor can these be considered as mutually antagonistic. His intellectual life is interwoven and oriented with his emotions and his will. Nowhere is this more clearly interlarded more influential than in the things of the spirit. Therefore, his concepts of religion have a direct bearing upon his conduct, for "as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

We should certainly not stultify or suspend that thinking, nor allow any other person to dictate or think for us. The final decision on the great questions of faith must in all instances rest with yourself. Otherwise your judgment could not have in any true sense a real value for you. Character, this is not to say that in arriving at your own conclusions you cannot legitimately receive stimulus and guidance from other minds than your own.

Diet and Health

By Lulu Hunt Peters, M. D.

Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children."

NON-MEDICATED AIDS ADVISED IF REDUCER IS CONSTIPATED

"I weighed 240 pounds and as my flesh was real solid, I thought I would take a real valiant line to reduce, but I lost 20 pounds in two months and I did not go on the liquid diet, either. But I became so constipated that I was in misery and I had to quit reducing. As soon as I went back on the old diet, with plenty of fats and all those rich foods, my constipation disappeared. I am afraid to weigh myself now, but I think I've gained back most of the 20 I lost. I would like to start all over again, if you can help me on this constipation problem."

The foundation reducing diet contains one and one-half to two pounds of fruits and vegetables (part of them raw) and this amount usually furnishes sufficient bulk for good elimination. In case it doesn't, advise the use of non-medicated agar or psyllium seeds, or both. (You can get these at the drug stores.)

Agar is manufactured from a certain seaweed. Until the last few years, all the agar we had was imported from Japan, but now, I'm glad to say, it is being manufactured on our own Pacific coast. It is even superior to the Japanese product. Agar is not digested; it absorbs considerable water and thus gives considerable bulk and is of great value in constipation. It can be taken in a large glassful of water or in soups or cereals. Here's a reducer's cereal—notice the word "reducer's" and not "reducing." (No foods are "reducing.") The rich one-heaping tablespoon of some cereal in a small cup of water, and when cooked for a few minutes, take from fire and stir in two or three tablespoonfuls of agar. You would be surprised how good this is with skim milk! One heaping tablespoonful of the dry cereal is approximately 50 calories and skim milk is 10 calories per ounce. If you take 10 ounces of the milk the whole thing amounts to but 150 calories. I frequently slice a medium sized banana or some other fruit into this (100 C.) and take it for lunch or my evening meal.

Bran is also good for the type of constipation due to lack of bulk in the food, but for the cereal bran you have to count 100 calories to two-thirds of a cupful. However, bran has mineral elements, vitamins and a good protein and carbohydrate value, so it is a wholesome addition to the diet for ordinary constipation due to lack of bulk.

Psyllium seeds are also excellent to produce bulk and lubrication. These are not absorbed, so no calories are counted. A heaping teaspoonful stirred into one-half cup of hot water and allowed to stand for a while, plus five ounces of skim milk (hot or cold) give you a delicious gruel which is very satisfactory to a reducer's yearning tummy and counts but 50 C.

If one (or more) of these agents is used every day at the same time of day, the type of constipation due to lack of bulk is relieved.

Go back to your reducing diet and try some of them, Mrs. S. Be sure you are getting the amount and type of food outlined in our foundation diet. If you don't reduce your weight, you will have something worse than constipation. The pamphlet on reducing and gaining outlines a foundation diet which should be used by normal weights as well as overweight persons.

Mrs. J.—Your questions will be answered by our articles on the Anemias, and Boils. See column Rules for obtaining these.

Editor's Note: Dr. Peters cannot diagnose, nor give personal advice. Your questions, if of general interest, will be answered in the column, in turn. Requests for articles must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope and 2 cents each for each article to cover cost of printing and handling. For the pamphlet on reducing and gaining, 10 cents in coin, with fully self-addressed, stamped envelope, must be enclosed. Address Dr. Peters, in care of this paper.

The rising generation ought to feel the detestation of the liquor traffic, the older generation feel a detestation which must be kept alive if prohibition is to continue. Only as the young are continually taught those bitter lessons which the rest of the world has learned, can the experience be they capable of rightly estimating the destructive force of intoxicating liquors.

HERE and THERE

Lunacharsky Holds On.

Had the world revolution occurred as swiftly as the Russian Communists hoped when they seized power in 1917, perhaps the name of Anatoly Lunacharsky, Soviet commissar of education, would have been lost to history. But while Russia remains the only Communist state in the modern world, it is he whose power is felt most outside of Russia.

The other members of the Communist "old guard," those who with Lenin and Trotsky overthrew the Kerensky government and did their best to plunge the rest of the world in bloody class warfare, have in turn risen to power and then have been banished to exile by their erstwhile "comrades."

One Lunacharsky retains the post he was given eleven years ago, that of supreme chief of the Russian schools and universities, censor of the press, promoter of the theater and cinema and czar in general of the development of culture under the soviets. His job is to guide the new artistic energies which have been released in the Russian masses, and during his administration, though Russian economic theories have met with scant favor, Russian ideas in moving picture technique, in the drama, in the dance and in letters have won both admiration and imitation.

Despite his severe censorship of the printed word, he has allowed extraordinary liberalism in this field, where he has defended the dramatic and musical traditions of old Russia, except in so far as they were positively "counter-revolutionary."

He freely admits that in the old culture there is much that the proletariat should accept and adopt for itself. Firmly opposed to the destruction of all forms inherited from the bourgeoisie, he maintains it is more important to eliminate the influence of the near past, of zealous and individualistic intellectuals who created a pseudo-proletarian art, seeks, rather, the complete absorption by the masses of individuality, the identification of art with the historical destiny of the people.

The Zeppelin Over The Holy Land.

(The Kansas City Star.)
The ancient hills and valleys between the River Jordan and the Mediterranean have written their way inextricably into the history of mankind. They have seen wondrous sights and have experienced miracles. They were the scene of battles twenty centuries before the day of Columbus. They have been inhabited by Canaanites, by Philistines, by Israelites, by Arabs and by Turks.

Woven into the story of the Holy Land are names like David, Jonathan, Saul, Elijah, the prophet Samuel, Solomon, and One who is greater than any of those. Centuries later there came into the saga such names as Godfrey of Bouillon, Frederick Barbarossa, Simon de Montfort, Richard Coeur de Lion and Saladin, figures in a series of wars in the name of Him who died on Calvary. Thoughts of this tremendous past must have come over the commander, crew and passengers of the Graf Zeppelin as they passed over Joppa, over Jerusalem, over Bethlehem and over the Dead Sea, as they saw in the east the Sea of Galilee, where once a man walked on the waters; as they passed over, in the west, the mount where Elijah called on the Lord for proof that He and not Baal was the true prophet.

Modern civilization penetrates everywhere. Not long ago there came a cable news dispatch with a date line from Nazareth. Motor cars and trucks travel the road to Jericho. A railroad skirts the Sea of Galilee, and another operates between Joppa and Jerusalem. The chances are that the inhabitants of that region were not much surprised when they saw the Graf Zeppelin flying overhead. Their newspapers had notified them it was coming, and when it flew over Jerusalem thirty-nine hours after leaving Friedrichshafen (the First Crusade reached Jerusalem in three years) it was interesting and perhaps amazing, but not unaccountable. They probably did not look up at the portent from heaven and sacrifice a portion from the altar. Two thousand years ago it would have been different.

Peter was still some little distance from that thicket where Lightfoot was when he discovered some one walking noiselessly just ahead of him. It was so sudden, so unexpected, that Peter's heart seemed to jump right up in his mouth. The one walking just in front of him was great, big Buster Bear. Yes, sir, it was great, big Buster Bear! He was traveling in the same direction that Peter was.

"I wonder where he's going," thought Peter, as he sat down to wait.

Belated Honor for Hero Who Captured a Machine Gun Nest

CHICAGO, April 8.—(AP)—Recognition for an act of heroism a dozen years ago will come to John V. Hogan, Chicago, in the form of a distinguished service cross. It will be presented tomorrow with appropriate ceremonies at Fort Sheridan.

The deed was performed near Bois-de-Mort Mare, France, September 12, 1918, while Hogan was a first class private in command of a platoon in the 35th infantry.

Encountering machine gun fire, which threatened to wipe out the platoon, Hogan, according to the citation, placed his men under cover and went forward alone without orders and in utter disregard for his own safety. He killed the gunner and one other, captured the gun, and took ten prisoners. He was constantly under heavy enemy fire, yet he pressed on with undaunted courage and determination.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Buster Bear Appears.
BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Even those who use the greatest care are sometimes taken unaware.
—Lightfoot the Deer.

Peter Rabbit visited Lightfoot the Deer c'ten. He began to understand why it was that Lightfoot kept himself so well hidden. Without his antlers, Lightfoot was quite as helpless as Mrs. Lightfoot. He had nothing wherewith to fight, except his hoofs. Furthermore, he had something of a feeling of shame. He shouldn't have had, but he did. Always he had been so proud of those antlers that to be without them and defenseless gave him little feeling of shame. Then, too, the rapid growth of the new antlers took much of his strength, so altogether, Lightfoot preferred to keep as quiet as possible, hidden away where he would not be disturbed. All this Peter had begun to understand.

It happened that early one morning Peter was on his way to pay Lightfoot a call. He knew that Lightfoot would be lying down in a certain thicket and it was toward this thicket that Peter was hopping along. He was going upwind. That means that the wind was blowing from the thicket where Lightfoot lay toward Peter. Peter knew just how Lightfoot would be lying. Lightfoot's nose would be pointed in the direction from which the wind was blowing. No enemy could approach from that direction without Lightfoot being warned in plenty of time by that wonderful nose. He would have his big ears widespread to catch any sound from other directions.

Peter was still some little distance from that thicket where Lightfoot was when he discovered some one walking noiselessly just ahead of him. It was so sudden, so unexpected, that Peter's heart seemed to jump right up in his mouth. The one walking just in front of him was great, big Buster Bear. Yes, sir, it was great, big Buster Bear! He was traveling in the same direction that Peter was.

"I wonder where he's going," thought Peter, as he sat down to wait.

Automotive Exports In February Set Record

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP)—A new high record was set in February by the export of American automotive products, their value being set today by the commerce department at $61,529,748, an increase of $13,936,000 over like exports in January, and $24,972,022 or 68 per cent more than for February last year. The previous high month record was set last October with a total of $50,737,000.

Argentina was the leading purchaser, with Canada and Australia next. The world demand is centering now on cheaper models of cars.

And then, all in a flash, it came to Peter! Buster Bear was after Lightfoot the Deer! There could be no doubt about it. That thicket of Lightfoot's was straight ahead. Lightfoot couldn't possibly smell Buster, and Buster was making out the smallest sound. Not a leaf rustled.

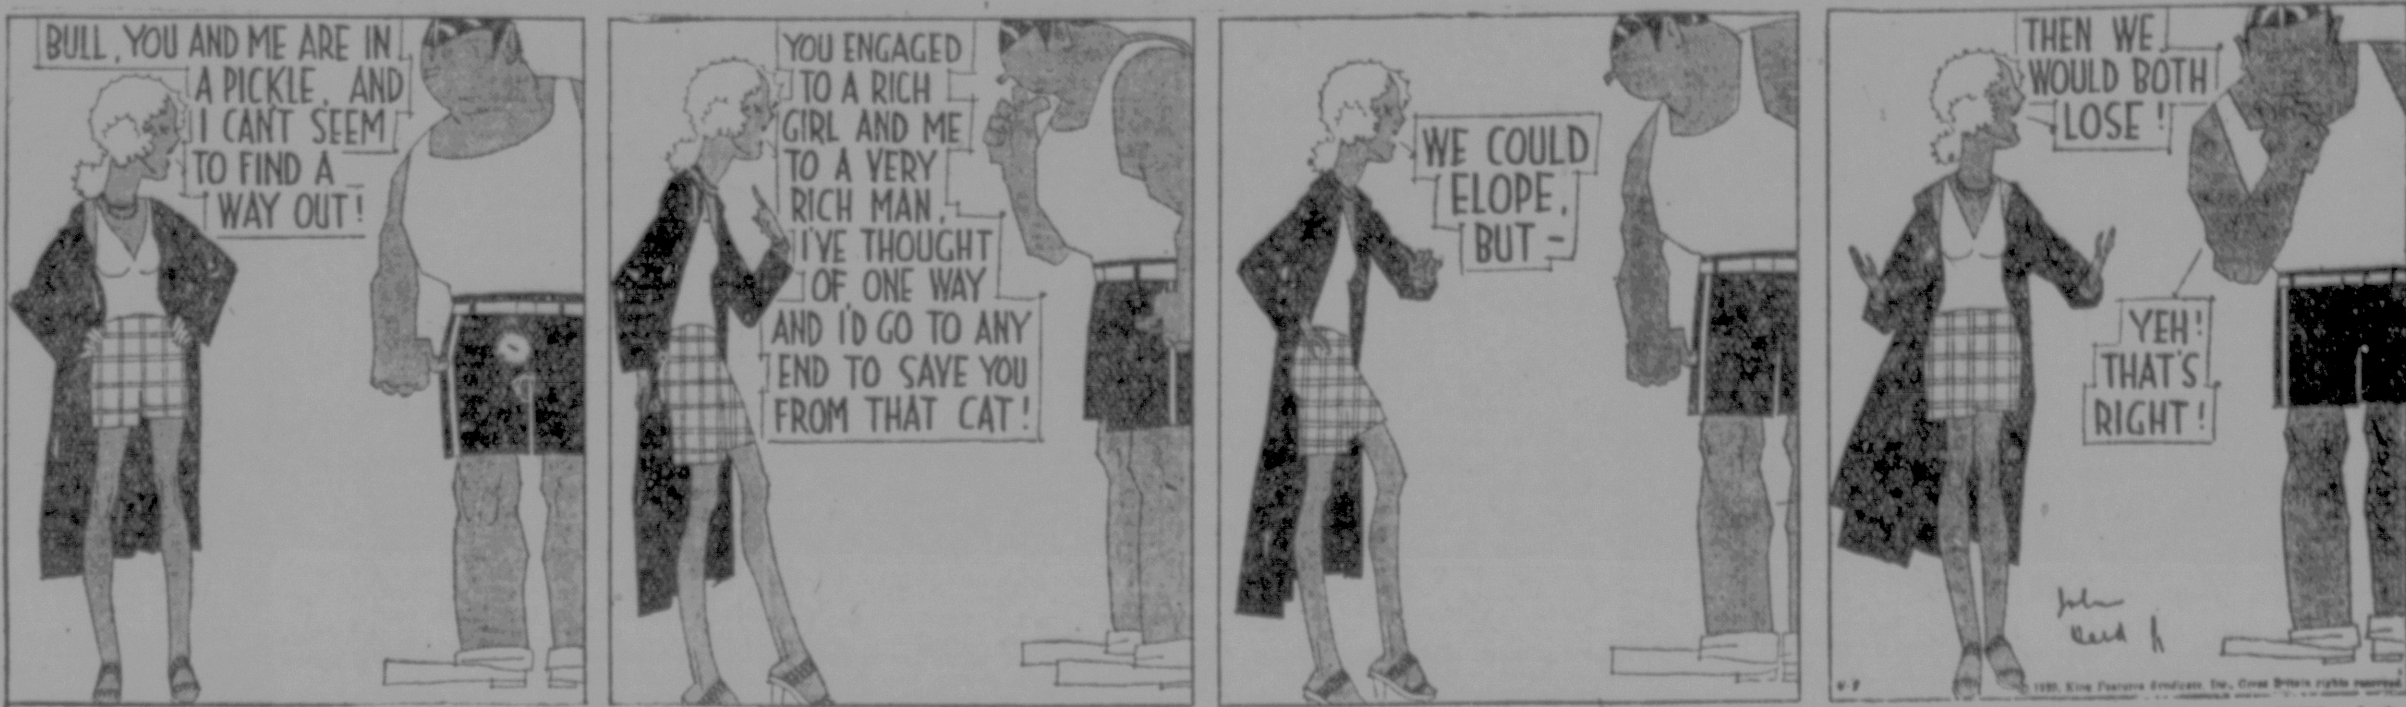

"He's after Lightfoot! He's after Lightfoot!" Peter kept saying

CLUB OPPOSED TO LANDING FEES AT MUNY AIR FIELD

The Mutual Flyers Club of Nebraska has given its approval of the developments thus far at the municipal airport, and in a letter to the council Monday suggested that nothing be left undone to make the field the center of aviation activities in the state. The field has not been developed as rapidly as the club has desired, the letter says, "but it is better to go slow than to make mistakes."

The club suggests that the council do away with landing fees. Instead, James A. Haviland, vice president and general manager, says, "make a high rental for hangar space. Landing fees penalize users of the field he claims and will restrict its use, and cause red tape and the necessity of a large operating organization."

The letter was ordered made a part of the record when read at the council meeting.

The council authorized the clerk to draw a warrant on the judgment fund in settlement of a judgment entered in District court for injuries to Sidney Held. The judgment is $125. The boy was burned by an electric wire while climbing a tree.

Payment of gas tax for "arch also was authorized. The amount for gasoline sold to the public is $1.04456, and $139.32 for sales to city departments. This latter sum is paid under protest.

Film Gone...Teeth regain sparkling whiteness

Film, too, is the source of serious tooth and gum disorders. Dentists urge special film-removing dentifrice.

Don't be discouraged if teeth are not white and sparkling. You have 9 chances in 10 that they are merely coated with a dingy film.

Film absorbs the stains from food and smoking and gives that cloudy look. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays.

Film hardens into tartar. Germs by the millions breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. To remove film, use the special film-removing dentifrice called Pepsodent. It acts to curdle film and easily remove it in gentle safety to enamel.

Don't expect the same results from old-time dentifrices. See for once and all how white and bright teeth really are. Get Pepsodent at any drug counter, or write for free 10-day supply to The Pepsodent Co., 1104 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

ARIZONA BORDER NOW GUARDED BY AN ARMY OF AMERICANS

Strong Forces of Americans Ready for Action Near Naco. Opening of Sixth Week of Revolt Finds Rebels On Defensive.

(By the Associated Press.) Eighteen American airplanes were ready to guard the Arizona border today in the event of further fighting in the Mexican revolution, while strong forces of American infantry and cavalry were prepared for any eventualities.

Opening of the sixth week of the insurrection found the rebels on the defensive, pinched more and more steadily into the three northwestern states, Sonora, Chihuahua and Sinaloa.

In the five weeks of open warfare, the rebels have been driven out of six other states in which they had obtained footholds, and suffered serious reverses in a major three days' battle around Jimenez and La Reforma. Vera Cruz was long since lost to them.

Both Sinaloa and Chihuahua have seen rebels retreat, with the possibility that the insurgents will be shortly forced out of Sonora.

To counteract this the insurgents still have strong forces in northern Chihuahua and northern Sinaloa and plan if necessary to concentrate in Sonora for a drive on the federal army.

There was little fighting over the weekend. The rebels continued their advance in Chihuahua and Sinaloa, while the rebels drew up positions to offer opposition.

General Calles passed through Aguas Calientes, apparently with the object of driving against the so-called religious insurgents in Jalisco and Guanajuato. There was also the possibility that he may proceed to Tepic and then swing northward to take over command of the federal drive against the rebels in Sinaloa.

The chief rebel plan now is to prevent union of the rebel forces now in Sinaloa and Chihuahua with the insurgents in Sonora.

Federals Now Hold Ojinaga. PRESIDIO, Tex., April 8.—(AP)—Estimate Mexican rebels, turned suddenly loyal to the government, have held Ojinaga, Mexico, across the border from here, after killing the insurgent commander and routing their former comrades, who sought to uphold his command.

The sudden assault on Ojinaga, Col. Paul Cardenas, the rebel commander, signaled the uprising yesterday which ended after a two hour skirmish with the federal troops. The rebels had been in control of the town. Captain Quintanilla, one of Cardenas' staff officers, was reported slain and two men, whose identities were not learned, were wounded.

Many bullets fell on the American side, with no resultant damage or injuries. Soon after the rifles started firing around the customs house, where the engagement started, United States cavalrymen drew up on this side of the river, protecting Americans from possible harm by keeping them out of the danger zone.

Meanwhile, Texans looked with a speculative eye toward Del Rio, where United States troops to Villa Acuna, Mexico, where a rebel cavalry detachment was reported moving. Twice this far the state's extreme southern residents have been in bitter strife with Mexican forces in the current revolution. No sign of military movement around Villa Acuna had been noted.

Tighten Immigration Rules. NOGALES, Ariz., April 8.—(AP)—Mexican revolutionary leaders tightened immigration rules here today, barring all Americans without passports from crossing the border. The measure was taken in retaliation for an order by United States immigration authorities denying the rebel officers permission to enter this country.

Thereafter American citizens were admitted into Mexican territory merely by identifying themselves as citizens of the United States.

The first pinch of the rebel order was felt by newspapermen covering the revolution at this point. Their usual credentials were refused last evening and they were asked to present passports.

U. S. Pilots Ready to Shoot. NACO, Ariz., April 8.—(AP)—United States army fliers, with eighteen fighting planes, were reported today from Fort Crockett, Tex., following the continued dropping of bombs on Arizona soil after the Mexicans had earned repeatedly against endangering the lives of American citizens.

Seven more officers and forty-four men of the Third aircraft group are on the way to reinforce the American fliers, having left Fort Crockett.

A sudden end to the rebel airplane bombing attacks which have harassed the loyal garrison at Naco, Sonora, across the line from here, was expected to result. Gen. Lucas Gonzalez, commander of the Mexican garrison, was advised to keep his planes on the ground because the American fliers might not be able to distinguish them from rebel planes.

Gen. Faustino Topete, commander of the rebel forces whose planes have dropped several bombs on the American side in their attacks on the garrison, announced his aviators would use only machine guns in the event they fly over the Sonora town again. Whether another attack would be staged by Topete's planes soon remained in doubt, however, as he declared last night he was awaiting orders from Gen. J. Gonzalo Escobar, revolutionary commander in chief, before taking further action.

formed to provide a supplement to the train service.

A number of objections to the granting of the application were filed with the commission by John Riddell of York in behalf of the Inter-State and other bus companies, who are operating along the Burlington's proposed route.

Among other things, he contended that the prevailing service is entirely sufficient and adequate, that granting of the application would be a contravention of existing laws, and that it would be confiscatory to the present operators.

In cross-examining T. D. Hite, general manager of the Burlington bus company, Riddell asked if this application was "an opening wedge toward control of traffic on Nebraska highways."

Hite answered with an emphatic "No."

Both Hite and Thomas were questioned as to whether in their opinion business demands additional service.

The answers were indirect, Thomas saying that he believed business might be created in the future. He also pointed out that experience of other bus operators has shown that business was often found lacking where it was expected but had turned up where it was not expected.

Questioned as to whether the company would continue to operate if a loss resulted, Thomas answered, "We might."

One objection to the color of the Burlington's buses, raised by other companies, was easily satisfied when Thomas said the company would be willing to use any distinctive color that might be agreed upon.

specific questions, thus expediting the final determination of the controversy.

"There is no merit in appellant's contention that he is entitled to a new trial because the court excluded evidence that in refusing to admit the evidence he acted in the advice of competent counsel," the decision said. "The gist of the offense is refusal to answer pertinent questions. No moral turpitude is involved."

"Intentional violation is sufficient to constitute guilt. There was no misapprehension as to what was asked for. The refusal to answer was deliberate. The facts sought were pertinent as a matter of law, and x x x 'he was bound rightly to construe the statute. His mistaken view of the law is no defense.'"

Going to Jail Soon. Sinclair will have probably less than two weeks before he must go to jail to serve the three months sentence, it was said today by United States Attorney Rover. The Supreme court, Rover said, usually sent its mandate to the Court of Appeals within ten days after a decision was handed down. The Court of Appeals then immediately sent its mandate to the District of Columbia and Sinclair will then be notified to appear to begin to serve his sentence.

Sinclair's counsel still can appeal to the court for a review of today's decision.

One other case, contempt of the District of Columbia Supreme court in connection with the jury shadowing episode of the trial of Albert B. Fall and Sinclair, still is pending in the highest court against the jail mate. In that case he was sentenced to six months in jail.

BOMBS EXPLODE ASK REMOVAL OF STATE HOME FOR INDIAN SONS

Several Persons Injured and Assemblymen Are Thrown Into Panic. British Inquiry Group in Legislature at Time of Outrage.

DELHI, India, April 8.—(AP)—Two bombs exploded in the Indian legislative assembly today, sharp on the heels of a parliamentary crisis, injured several persons and caused a panic among the assemblymen.

Among the injured was Sir George Schuster, finance member of the governor general's executive council. He and the others injured were taken to a hospital. Sir John Simon, head of the crown committee for constitutional reform in India, was standing with the president of the assembly when the explosion occurred, but was not hurt.

Others injured were: Sir D. Raghuvendra, Mr. Eshankar Rao, Mr. Dalal (seriously), N. N. Roy, deputy secretary of the Indian central committee, who was sitting in the officer's gallery. Roy died profusely.

Three government benches were torn to bits by the bombs. Fair Under Arrest.

Two men were arrested and were reported to have confessed after other bombs and pistols were found on their persons. They gave their names as Bhutukwar, Dutt, from Bengal, domiciled at Cawnpore, and Bagat Singh from Punjab.

Thrown into the crowded assembly room with the two bombs was a red pamphlet entitled "Hindustan Socialist Republican Army," and signed by "Balraj, honorary chief." The effect of the bombs on the legislative assembly was to drive them instantly into panic. Police, who locked the doors to prevent the escape of the perpetrators, had difficulty in restraining the crowd containing both assemblymen and those in the galleries.

Discussing Safety Bill. V. G. Patel, president of the assembly, had just risen to give a ruling when the first of the bombs exploded. The second exploded a moment later. The ruling had to do with whether discussion should be allowed on the public safety bill. The president ruled it should not be considered until Saturday, when the trial of alleged communist conspirators recently arrested at Meerut was to be concluded. The government contested Patel's view and his power to bar discussion and several members suggested that the occasion required the viceroy's intervention.

The presence of Sir John Simon in the assembly room was given significance because he and his colleagues have just completed a semester of investigation of facts and opinion which British authorities regard as the most important undertaking of the year. The commission was expected to embark April 13 from Bombay for England with certain tentative proposals which might pave the way for a kind of autonomy for India.

DR. ALEXIS FAVORS U. S. INTERFERENCE IN LATIN AMERICA

That the United States has a moral obligation to take a hand and prevent bloodshed and turmoil when the internal affairs of the smaller countries to the south of us warrant it is the opinion expressed by Dr. Joseph A. Alexis, professor of romance languages of the University of Nebraska, at the Cosmopolitan club luncheon Monday noon at the Cornhusker hotel.

Dr. Alexis has spent considerable time studying Mexico City and traveling through the interior.

In speaking of the present rebellion against the Gil government, Dr. Alexis declared that the constituted authorities are only attempting to uphold the law, although the religious element in the struggle complicates the situation.

The Monroe doctrine prevents European countries from taking a hand in American politics, therefore it devolves upon the United States to act as moderator when conditions warrant, the speaker asserted. He stressed the fact that the United States is a far wealthier country, said Dr. Alexis and it should not be allowed to continue for centuries beset by one revolution after another.

Friendship co-operation with the United States is Mexico's chief hope, asserted Dr. Alexis. Stating that it might be well for the United States to possess the republic to the south of us, he said that it is improbable that we ever shall.

Eielson, Pilot for Wilkins Over North Pole, Given Trophy

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 8.—(AP)—Carl B. Eielson, who piloted the plane in which Capt. Hubert Wilkins, flew across the polar regions, from Point Barrow, Alaska, to Soltzberg, received from President Hoover today the Harmon trophy, awarded annually for outstanding feats of aviation.

The ceremony was attended by Assistant Secretary of Commerce William P. MacCracken, for aeronautics, who later was Eielson's host at luncheon. At the time of his flight Eielson was an inspector in the aviation section of the commerce department and was given leave for the purpose of joining the Wilkins expedition.

The trophy was established three years ago by Clifford Harmon, now president of the International League of Aviators. It was awarded to Shirley Short, of the air mail service, and last year it was given to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh for his flight across the Atlantic.

ASK REMOVAL OF STATE HOME FOR INDIAN SONS

are proposed in resolutions drafted Monday afternoon.

The resolutions call upon Governor Weaver to have a bill drawn and presented to carry out this plan, which would involve the sale of the Whitehall property and also a 40-acre farm tract east of Bethany now occupied and operated as part of the children's home.

Representative Ewell Johnston, chief sponsor of the scheme in the lower chamber, expected to offer it during the afternoon. It would be signed, he said, by more than 20 of his colleagues. The duplicate resolution in the senate was to be presented by Senators Kennedy and others.

Mr. Johnston, together with Messrs. Bailey, Essam and others, backed a proposal in the 1927 legislative session to have the Whitehall tract sold and the home for dependents relocated, but it did not receive enough support at that time to put it through.

If the plan should be ratified now, it would mean the abandonment of the Whitehall institution. The soldier's home and the concentration of veterans of all wars in future at the Grand Island soldiers' home. However, those now at Whitehall would be permitted to remain there.

In order to house and care for the combined population at Grand Island another building would be needed, Representative Johnston thinks.

The Milford establishment has a considerable amount of unoccupied space in its buildings, said Representative Bailey, and could probably take care of the population from the home for dependents without any more edifices, assuming that some of the present inmates would be transferred to Grand Island.

Herewith is the text of the resolution on which legislative action is being sought.

"Whereas the first home established in 1869 proved to be unsatisfactory and the present home established in 1926 is not satisfactorily located, due to the fact that the Whitehall property and tracts being about two miles apart, and is not adequate for a state home for dependents, and

"Whereas the state is confronted with the problem of providing a suitable home and school for its dependent children; and

"Whereas the Civil war veterans and their wives who now are living at the branch soldiers' home at Milford, and who are not adequately housed and fed at the branch soldiers' home located near Grand Island; and

"Whereas the Civil war veterans and their wives will have the privilege of remaining at the branch soldiers' home after its discontinuance as a soldiers' home; therefore, be it enacted by the house of representatives of the forty-fifth general assembly of the state of Nebraska that

"The house do pass a bill to be known as the 'Whitehall bill,' which shall read: 'Be it enacted by the legislature of the state of Nebraska that the Whitehall property and tracts being about two miles apart, and is not adequate for a state home for dependents, and

5-CENT FARE IS ORDERED IN NEW YORK CITY

Interborough Prohibited From Increasing Charge to 7 Cents.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 8.—(AP)—The Interborough Rapid Transit Co. of New York today was prohibited by the Supreme court from increasing to 7 cents its present 5-cent fare.

Justice McReynolds, in delivering the opinion, stated that action of the lower court in granting temporary increase to 7 cents was imprudent and exceeded its discretion and could not be maintained. He said that the Interborough should have appealed to the State courts from an adverse action of the transit commission instead of going into Federal courts.

The case was before the court on the question whether the contracts by which provided for a 5-cent fare, were within the provisions of the public service commission law basing rates on the value of the carrier property.

Decision in the controversy climaxed a bitter fight by the city and state transit commission to set aside the order of a statutory Federal court restraining the commission from interfering with the operation of a 7-cent fare schedule announced February 1, 1928.

Stocks Thrown Overboard. NEW YORK, April 8.—(AP)—Stocks of the New York Traction companies were thrown overboard on the New York stock exchange today on the announcement that the Interborough Rapid Transit Co. had lost its right to a 7-cent fare before the United States Supreme court. The adverse decision took Wall Street by surprise, and the break in traction stocks depressed stock prices generally.

The traction stocks had risen sharply until the decision was announced. Even as the decision was being read they were bought at rising prices, but as soon as it was apparent that the Supreme court had been lost, the stocks quickly went into a nosedive.

I. R. T. had risen $5 a share to $20 but quickly dropped to $16. Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit rose $3.50 to $78.50, and reacted to $66. Third Avenue Railway Co. stock rose $4.75 to $38, and tumbled to $24. Elgin, Joliet and Eastern Railway modified guaranteed stock sold up $2 to $54, then broke to $37.

Long a Discouraged Note. NEW YORK, April 8.—(AP)—The "straw hangers" nickel, recognized as the legal fare on New York's underground and overhead transit lines by the United States supreme court today, was flung into the air through the city's civic and political affairs for a while.

One mavor, John F. Hyland, sat in city hall for eight years largely because he had been a "straw hanger" who wished to add 2 pennies to the nickel fare on the city-owned, but privately operated subway and elevated.

The cohorts of the "hangers" on the other hand, argued that the fare was actually denying the fare of his constituents in that they had to make up in taxes the deficit caused by a low fare, whereas commuters from the metropolitan district outside the city would take the subway and elevated.

"Though the subway and elevated nickel was not finally rolled into the courts until a year ago it has been before and the results of the feeling stirred up may not be ended yet."

Some political writers, speaking upon the city election of November last year, have announced the opinion that the subway mavor, James J. Walker, depended to a not inconsiderable extent upon retention of the 5-cent fare.

Rehabilitation of Storm Area Pushed

Relief Work Well Under Way As Arrangements Made for Funerals of Victims in Three States.

(By the Associated Press.)

Rehabilitation activities were started today in communities in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Iowa, struck by Friday night's tornado.

Two other planes flying to the Wyndham area to aid in search of the fliers who disappeared Sunday, March 31, were reported. Lieut. Keith Anderson arrived at Broken Hill and Captain Holden reached Newcastle waters, northern territory, in a DeHavilland machine. This plane is about 400 miles from Wyndham where the missing fliers are located.

The parties searching by land for the missing aviators are expected in some quarters to be of more use in locating the men than airplanes or river boats.

CARBARY TO TRY OWN DRY RAIDER

Aurora Prosecutor to Conduct Case Against DeKling Slayer.

AURORA, Ill., April 8.—(AP)—State's Attorney George D. Carbary will have charge of the investigation of the killing of Mrs. Lillian DeKling by dry raiders, it was decided today.

Mr. Carbary, after the DeKling home had been invaded by deputy sheriffs and Mrs. DeKling killed, her husband inured and a deputy sheriff shot, asked Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom to take charge of the case. The state's attorney believed he had disqualified himself by expressing an opinion as to the justification of the shooting.

Mr. Carlstrom refused and attorneys for Joseph DeKling, husband of the woman killed, announced they would take charge of the investigation. They appeared in court today with the petition but after a conference with Judge John K. Newhall they agreed not to present it. It was also decided the grand jury into session before April 23, the regular time.

Fairchild to Be Arraigned. Eugene Boyd Fairchild, dry investigator whose purchase of a pint of liquor led to the raid, was to be arraigned this afternoon. Fairchild is charged with perjury. A warrant for his arrest was issued after a coroner's jury found he had falsified an affidavit about buying liquor of Mrs. DeKling.

State's Attorney Carbary, in announcing before the hearing that he would take charge of the investigation, said he would present the grand jury with a complete set of facts as he found them, but he would do so without comment or advice. The investigation will center about Roy Smith, deputy sheriff who was in charge of the raid and who fired the shot that killed Mrs. DeKling. He is in an Elgin hospital suffering with a bullet wound in the leg, received when shot by the 12-year-old son of the woman. He was served last week with a coroner's mittimus charging him with murder in the first degree. A coroner's jury having decided the shooting was unnecessary and recommending he be held to the grand jury on this charge.

SOUTHERN CROSS HUNT CONTINUES

Captain Chater Uninjured When Plane Wrecked in Crash.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., April 8.—(AP)—Search for Capt. Charles Kingsford Smith and the missing Southern Cross fliers has already cost one of the searching fliers a forced landing and a disabled plane.

Capt. I. S. Chater, who has been prominent in the search, was forced down in the Port George area Saturday by magnetic trouble. R. Neath, sent to look for Chater discovered him at Walcott Inlet with a badly damaged plane, although he himself was safe and uninjured.

Two other planes flying to the Wyndham area to aid in search of the fliers who disappeared Sunday, March 31, were reported. Lieut. Keith Anderson arrived at Broken Hill and Captain Holden reached Newcastle waters, northern territory, in a DeHavilland machine. This plane is about 400 miles from Wyndham where the missing fliers are located.

East In Grip Of Heat Wave

NEW YORK, April 8.—(AP)—The unseasonable warm wave which struck the metropolis yesterday continued today. At midday the mercury was nearing the 80 degree mark. Weather bureau sharp said there would be a gradual rise in temperature until late today, when showers would cause a drop.

The mercury yesterday touched 86 degrees, the hottest April 7 on record here.

Hope For Early Relief. WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP)—The forecaster gave grounds today for hope that the east's heat wave would be materially lessened tomorrow, and that some states are to have relief by tonight.

The south Atlantic states are to experience little change in temperature, but gentle winds from the southwest or southeast are expected to temper the sweltering heat.

The eastern seaboard was promised clouds and showers for today. The early sun in Washington, however, gave little hope that the thermometer today would keep much below its record breaking mark of 94 yesterday.

BANNING'S BILL TO BE REVIVED

Provides for Destruction of Red Cedars Near Orchards.

Senator Banning's bill to destroy red cedar trees afflicted with rust which they are located near an apple orchard, which the state senate passed early in the session but which was later killed in the house, is to be brought back to life again under a motion offered in the house Monday afternoon by Mr. Sprick, at whose instigation it was definitely postponed some weeks ago. The motion was adopted.

Friends of the measure have succeeded in convincing its opponents that it is needed for the protection of the apple crop, which in some communities has been seriously injured by scales of the red cedar blight.

It is now intended, Mr. Sprick said, to bring back the Banning bill, S. F. 82, an amendment to the act of 1917, which will apply in its changed form only to cedars located in the vicinity of orchards containing 1,000 or more trees—a minimum area of 15 to 20 acres. Also, provision will be made for appraising damages of the person owning the cedar trees, for payment before they are destroyed.

The house unanimously adopted a resolution of sympathy to Representative George Staats of Fremont, whose sister, Mrs. Nellie Harmon, passed away at that place last week.

British Rule May Take Edge Off Joplin Boy's Game

Horton Smith Not So Good At Business of Swinging Wooden Clubs

BY DAVIS J. WALSH.

NEW YORK, April 8.—Horton Smith may be the man of the hour in competitive golf, but it is altogether possible that he will be just another Smith in the city directory after they bring in the final returns from the British open championship, if you care for a dispassionate diagnosis furnished by fellow-members of the Ryder cup team today. He has the shots, they concede. But it seems that he may not have the clubs. Smith, they say, is something less than extraordinary when he uses the hickory shafts demanded by British convention—and maybe I mean prejudice.

Not So Good With Hickory.

The young man's implied lack of efficiency with hickory, I suspect, is largely a matter of one nation. Give a golfer like Smith plenty of time and no doubt he will play you a very nice shot with an umbrella handle. It just happens that he has less time right now than a man enroute down an elevator shaft without the elevator.

The team sails for England Wednesday and they tell me that Smith has played only once with all-hickory clubs. That once, it appears, was away too often. He finished in a desperate fight for fifteenth place at Beller and thereupon decided that the next time he played with hickory would be when he had to.

Steel Habit Confirmed.

During an otherwise miraculous winter season, this was the only tournament in which Smith looked like any other Smith. He is a confirmed addict of steel shafts and the attempted transition to hickory apparently played pranks with his timing.

The difference between the feel of hickory and steel, and even the difference between hickory and bamboo, of which American golf shafts are made, can best be illustrated by saying that one cannot "sense" the head of the club so well when all-hickory is in use.

Farrell Also Bothered.

Johnny Farrell, the national open champion, had an indifferent winter season, and he is said to attribute his showing to the fact that he was using all-hickory in preparation for the British event and couldn't seem to get the feel of his club.

If it took Farrell all winter to get nowhere with hickory, it would appear to be possible for Horton Smith to arrive approximately at the same place in the few weeks in his disposal.

Of course, when one is in Rome, as they say, one is under obligation to follow traffic and, naturally, England's golf code is its own to do with as it will.

No Blindfold Test Here.

At the same time, it is only fair to point out that an Englishman can bring his clubs to our championships without finding it necessary either to undergo the blindfold test or to furnish a letter of recommendation from his pastor.

But, then, we seem to need no technical aid in preserving our prestige in golf, whereas, England not only gets most technical but also a very average trouncing nearly every time out. The result is that it becomes to look as though it will turn out of championships before it runs out of reprisals.

First Crack at Travis.

The first of these was instituted years ago. Walter Travis won the British amateur title, so they up and barred the Scherer. Everything was just lovely for a while, but Jock Hutchinson came to spoil it all by winning the British open, which left them no alternative. They had to out the bowser on the slotted iron.

The next to go was the steel shaft. It didn't mean a thing to anybody in particular, many of the pros don't use this type of clubs, anyhow. But the British were taking no chances. Not unlike the strap pin that so many people find irresistible, it was a device that might come in handy some day.

Horton a High-Grader.

I won't go so far as to say that this looks like the day and that Horton Smith is the new candidate. But he ought to be allowed to use any legitimate club that he fancies and, speaking on legitimacy, if there was an unnatural advantage coming to the user of steel shafts, Smith is just the fellow who wouldn't be using them.

As a matter of fact, there are a lot of people who couldn't hit a baseball with one of the things. The whole matter narrows down to the fact that Smith happens to like this type of shaft for his wood clubs and the British are determined that everybody shall like their kind or go play with somebody else's children.

However, there is one factor which fortunately no rule book can suppress. This is the fact that it is American golfers, and not techni-

calists, that have been winning so many of the British championships.

Farrell, Sarazen Beat Diegel, Smith

GARDEN CITY, N. J., April 8.—America's Ryder cup golfers, who sail for England Wednesday to play a picked team of British professionals, have played their final practice round in this country. In a benefit affair here yesterday, Johnny Farrell and Gene Sarazen defeated Leo Diegel and Horton Smith 2 up.

Smith was hampered by a large gallery of boys, who sought his autograph after every shot.

calists, that have been winning so many of the British championships.

British Change Tourney Date.

LONDON, April 8.—(AP)—British golf authorities announced today that the amateur championship would be set back two weeks, starting June 10, instead of May 27. The change was made because of conflict of the earlier date with a general election.

Derbyists Away On Punishing Run

HANCOCK, Md., April 8.—(AP)—C. C. Pyle's bunions will have their ups and downs this week. Beginning with today's trek to Cumberland, they must climb the Appalachian mountains to Uniontown, Pa., which they will reach Tuesday.

Ed Gardner, dusky runner from Seattle, yesterday closed the gap which separated him from John Salo, Passaic, N. J., policeman, by winning the lap from Frederick here to approach to within 21 minutes of the plodding policeman.

Salo held to his narrow margin on total elapsed time by finishing second in the Frederick-Hancock lap. Peter Gavuzzi of two hours behind Gardner, with Arthur Newton of South Africa coming up to fourth, one hour further down the line, placed third in yesterday's lap.

Four more of the entries dropped by the way side yesterday. The Belgian brothers, Karl and Juel Coels, Thomas B. Ellis of Hamilton, Ontario, and Martin Johansen of Rockford, Ill., failed to start from Frederick.

CUE RIVALS CLASH IN SPECIAL MATCH

NEW YORK, April 8.—Frank Taberski, pocket billiard champion, and Ralph Greenleaf, who, with Taberski, has monopolized the title since 1916, start their widely-heralded "grudge match" here today. The winner of the 12-club match will collect $1,500, plus a share of the gate receipts.

Taberski's title is not at stake, however. Ill feeling between the pair was engendered in the title tourney in Chicago last December, play-offing marked by considerable friction.

North-South Amateur On Pinehurst Links

PINEHURST, N. C., April 8.—The qualifying round of the twenty-ninth annual north and south amateur championship got under way here this morning, with more than 150 golfers teeing off. Match play will begin Wednesday.

George Vogt is the defending champion. His leading rival is the clubbed John Dawson of Chicago; Phillips Finlay of Harvard and Eddie Held of St. Louis.

BRITISHERS KIND TO REIGH COUNT

Racing Experts Predict Yankee Horse Better Next Time Out.

LONDON, April 8.—Despite his poor showing Saturday in the Lingfield Handicap, most of the newspaper experts on horse flesh here believe that Reigh Count, famous American horse, will do much better than come in eighth in his future starts.

Reigh Count has been entered for the Newbury Cup at Ascot next Saturday, together with Vaballero and Yoho, which placed in the Lingfield Handicap last Saturday.

"Reigh Count's stock has not been seriously discounted by his showing Saturday," the Daily Express expert said today.

"The Daily Star" observer thinks "Reigh Count" will prove a good proposition when he is better acclimated to English weather."

Reigh Count is not lacking in character and may prove better at Ascot," was the Evening Standard's expert's opinion.

President Hoover To Toss First Ball

NEW YORK, April 8.—(AP)—The Columbia broadcasting system announced today it would broadcast the ceremonies at Washington on April 16, when President Hoover throws out the first ball of the opening game of the American league season there.

A.A.U. PROPOSES ATHLETIC PEACE

Brundage Anxious Talk Things Over With Griffith.

CHICAGO, April 8.—(AP)—A movement, which may change the complexion of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States and its policies toward amateur and professional sports, has been started by Avery Brundage of Chicago, president.

Brundage has addressed a lengthy questionnaire, including every possible phase of amateur and professional sports, to the 157 members of the A. A. U. and when their answers are in, he expects to see a change in the constitution, which hasn't been altered materially since it was adopted in 1888.

At least five results are expected from the questionnaire, Brundage said. They are:

Declares for Harmony.

Consummation of close harmony between the A. A. U. and the National Collegiate Association.

Formation of a high judiciary commission of five or more men to be supreme in all matters of amateur eligibility, the commission to function for amateur athletics as Commissioner K. M. Landis does in professional baseball.

Creation of a better understanding and keener appreciation of the A. A. U. by the public.

Recognition of the A. A. U. by kindred organizations as the governing body in all amateur athletics, excepting that which is strictly collegiate.

Repealing of the A. A. U. constitution and rules to fit present day needs and to accomplish fulfillment of the foregoing objectives.

Conference With Griffith.

After issuing the questionnaire, Brundage departed for New York, where he, with a committee of A. A. U. officials, will confer Tuesday with Major John L. Griffith, executive vice president of the National Amateur Athletic Federation and an executive member of the N. C. A. A., with rival organizations of the union, in an attempt to patch up differences and effect a working agreement with American colleges.

"There has been considerable complaint about the A. A. U. and its policies lately," Brundage explained. "We want to show everyone we are open to constructive criticism and are willing to correct any defects, if there are any."

Griffith further explained that the A. A. U. was formed when most amateur sports were competed in by non-college men. Today, college sports have grown to be the leaders in the amateur field, he said.

Board Gives Okay To Cinder Meets

Official sanction was granted seven intercollegiate track and field meets Monday by Secretary Walter I. Black of the Nebraska High School Athletics association. The announcement also was made of the change of date in the Norfolk invitation meet, the event having been moved to April 26. The new meets scheduled:

April 11—Loup Valley meet at Ord.
April 19—Red Willow county meet at McCook.
May 1—Republican Valley league at Franklin.
May 3—Holt county at O'Neill.
May 3—Western Nebraska at Scottsbluff.
May 4—M-I-N-K at Peru.
May 17—Dawson county at Lexington.

SWIMMER FALLS SHORT OF RECORD

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 8.—(AP)—Norris Kellam, 300 pound self-styled "human cork," today failed by one hour of equalling the world's endurance swimming record of 72 hours and 22 minutes when he collapsed in a bathing pool here. He entered the water at 9:55 a. m. last Friday.

Horton Looms Up As Challenge to Bobby

IS HORTON SMITH THE YOUNG OKLAHOMA MARVEL, THE COMING SUPER-GOLFER?

WILL HE EVER SHOOT A 59 FOR 18 HOLES?

HE COULD WRITE HIS CONTRACT—HITTER EVER APPEAR ON THE SCENE—?

Has the super-golfer finally appeared to challenge the supremacy of Bobby Jones? Horton Smith, the 26-year-old Joplin, Mo., professional, has been fairly burning up the western and southern golf courses this winter. His latest achievement was winning the north and south open with 267 and the second annual $15,000 La-Torce open golf tournament with a 289, taking the $5,000 purse from a field of the nation's most prominent exponents of the game.

While on the subject of super-athletes in any line I have often wondered if a super-pitcher in baseball comparable to Babe Ruth in the home run field will ever develop.

I mean a real super pitcher, even better than Mathewson, Johnson, Cy Young, Rube Waddell and Alexander—a giant with so much stuff that he could literally throw the ball past a batter—a fellow who could win 40 games a year with a ball and team.

The idea is an interesting one. I wonder if it will ever appear on the scene or if such a super-pitcher is physically possible.

Husker Ball Tossers Laid Up With Mumps

The hard luck jinx continued Monday to camp on the Cornhusker baseball squad's trail, with the announcement from the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity house that Harvey Grace, leading pitcher on the varsity squad, was nursing a case of mumps.

Grace's absence will bring a shift of "Dutty" Witte to first base, according to Coach "Choppy" Rhodes.

Smash Targets In Registered Shoot

The Lincoln Gun club's first registered shoot of the 1929 target-breaking campaign, staged Sunday at the Capitol Beach grounds, attracted a field of 59 gunners, many coming from southeast Nebraska points.

A stiff wind was blowing out of the north and gave the shooters considerable trouble. Yet numerous creditable scores were turned in during the two events—150 targets in the singles and 12 pairs of doubles.

High honors for the day went to J. F. Sammann of Lincoln and W. M. Krenner of Omaha. Krenner, of North Bend, each of whom broke 144 targets in the singles. Sammann also was top man in the doubles with a total of 22 hits.

George Jensen of Council Bluffs finished third in the singles event, with a score of 140. Cal Waggoner of Diller, veteran target-buster with a string of state championships to his credit, was fourth with 138.

Waggoner, of Beatrice, Charles Waggoner, also of Diller, and R. W. Kurth of Fairbury were in a tie for fifth with 147. The scores:

STAGG STICKS TO TOURNEY SCHEME

Chicago Man Intends Put On Cage Fest, Despite Hi Opposition.

CHICAGO, April 8.—(AP)—A team of young gunns from Athens, Texas, with a distinctly futuristic style of play, today held the most cherished prize of high school basketball—the national interscholastic championship.

The title fell to the sturdy Texans Saturday night as they capped a spectacular week's campaign in the eleventh annual tournament by a 25 to 21 decision over Cassen, a fast, scrappy team from Oklahoma City.

Coaches and critics of basketball, who watched Athens' march to the crown, were interested in its style of play, which they termed futuristic in pattern. Averaging approximately six feet two inches each, the Texans played a peculiar overhead game, which none of their opponents could solve.

Athens Boys Lefty.

This "high" game, with its high passes aimed at leaping mates, is difficult and the percentage of errors by opponents is high. For that reason, the champions were superior throughout offensively. Too, they covered rebounds off their opponents' basket with hawklike tenacity, tipping many of them back for field goals.

On defense, too, they excelled. Their height gave them several more chances at being fouled and consequently more free throws, while they employed three or four men for defensive purposes around their own goal.

Third Place to Joes.

Third place in the tournament, which attracted 40 teams from 33 states, went to the most picturesque team in the competition—Joes, Colorado. This team from a village of 90 persons was shoved out of the championship running by Classen high in the semi-final, but came back to win third place by defeating Jackson, Michigan, 21 to 17, after making a brilliant rally in the last period.

Brooklyn, Mass., won the consolation title by defeating Morton high of Cicero, Ill., 17 to 10.

Mr. Stagg Bows His Neck

Amos Alonzo Stagg, athletic director of the University of Chicago and father of the tournament, announced last night that, despite opposition from some state interscholastic associations, the tournament would continue to be an annual event.

Stagg said the tournament meant

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 8.—Having lost interest in the proposed 45-round fight between Mickey Walker and Tommy Loughran, Harry M. Pollok of Tijuana, Mexico, announced today he was negotiating for a match between Walker and Ace Hudkins for the middleweight championship.

Pollok asserted he had offered Jack Kearns $100,000 for Walker's end of the purse and that Hudkins had been offered $25,000. The proposed bout, which would be held at Tijuana, would be 45 rounds to a decision, Pollok said.

"Hey, Bill!"

I don't know which cigarette this is, but it sure wins my vote!"

W. H. (Bill) McCord, of Post & McCord, steel contractors for New York's tallest skyscrapers, holds cigarette test with 94 workers.

Friend, you're smoking a certain cigarette today because you feel it's the best brand for you.

And maybe you're right. But have you ever really checked up? Ever said to Old Man Habit, "Now you step out of the room. I'm going to smoke the four leading brands with brand names forgotten and just let my taste say which one is best."

The other day one of these tests was made among the huskiest fellows in New York... those two-fisted chaps who work with steel girders, sky-high above the city streets.

Their own boss, Mr. W. H. McCord, was referee and score keeper. Each cigarette was "masked" and numbered. All Mr. McCord said was, "Tell me which one you like the best."

The result speaks for itself! 69 out of 94 men voted for OLD GOLD!

OLD GOLDS win time after time in these public tests, because smokers find them smoother and better... with not a cough in a carload.

This Week's Program.

Tonight—At New York, N. Y., Nicholas Brothers, New York, vs. Vince Dundee, Baltimore, welterweights, 10 rounds; at Chicago, Mike Hannell, St. Paul, vs. Pete Winter, South Chicago, heavyweights, 10 rounds; at Memphis, Tom Winn, Memphis, vs. Bloddy Davis, Mobile, heavyweights.

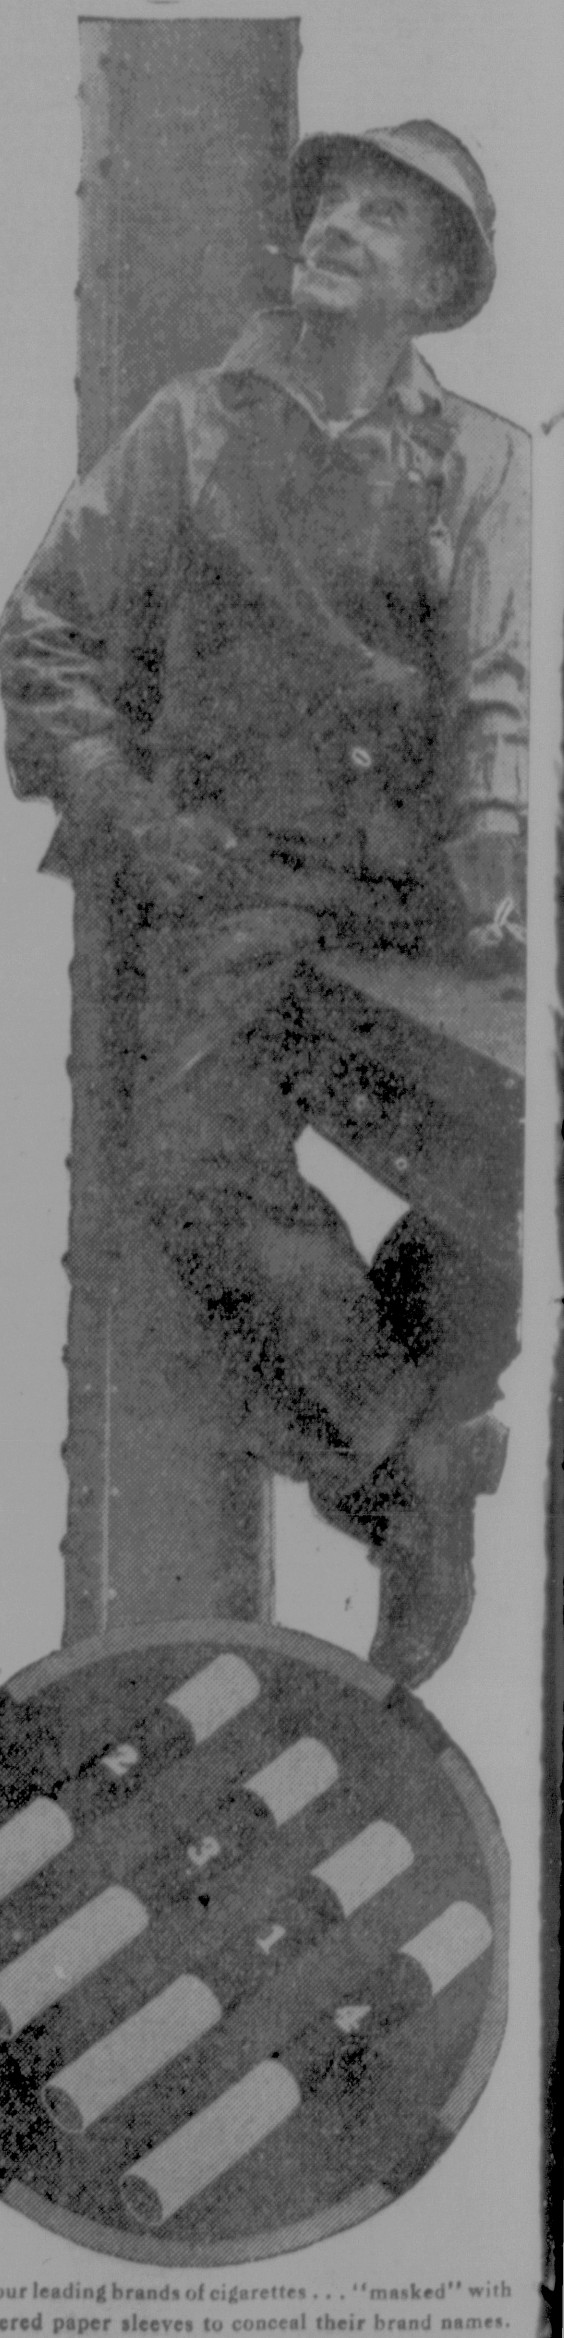

Tuesday—At Cleveland, Gorilla Jones, Akron, vs. Tommy Freeman, Erie Pa., welterweights, 10 rounds; at Chicago, Al Greenfield, Chicago, vs. Freddie Mitchell, Belshum, lightweights, 10 rounds.

Thursday—At Detroit, Louis (Kid) Kaplan, lightweights, 10 rounds, and Soldier Dombrowski, Detroit, vs. Eddie Shea, Chicago, featherweights, 10 rounds.

Friday—At New Orleans, Manuel Quintero, Tampa, Fla., vs. Billy Podrazo, lightweights.

MINERVA'S MAIL

Take Your Troubles To Minerva

Slicing the Bacon.

Girls, make your extra money at home by the means of slicing the bacon which your husband brings home to you, and when closing time comes and you check up, you will find you are holding your own with the working wife in every way, even including luxuries such as mutual respect, contentment and peace of mind.

Thus advises "Mrs. Twenty-five," in an interesting contribution to the problem of whether the married woman should leave her home for a salaried job or not.

She says that the capable woman making good in a profession or business or art is the very one who should be in the home, giving the education and culture through the medium of her children.

Dear Minerva: To express my view on the subject of the "Working Wife" I must use some of your own words.

The wife starting out to work, I think, goes with the idea of making it a temporary arrangement and intends to treat the money as an extra fund to be saved or used for extra luxuries not otherwise possible. If there are two salaries the couple forms the habit of living in a manner that would not be possible on one and then it is difficult for the wife to adjust herself later if the wife wishes to stop working.

But the trouble is they most generally never get enough. I know men who seem to be doing well, but continually, for one reason or another, when the wife is working. They lose all interest in the home.

Another thing that makes such an arrangement fall down and "go boom" is the wife's general attitude at home, and even at work. I never saw a wife on her own yet that let her husband forget it for one moment. My sister has a weekly pay check of fifteen dollars and according to her she has bought furniture for a large house, a sixteen hundred dollar car, clothes herself and her daughter, paid for a couple of operations which she wouldn't have needed otherwise. All the time she's keeping one more single girl from holding a half way decent job, that really needed to keep a roof over her head and her feet on the ground and narrow, without even a thought of chitron hose and rhinestone slippers.

The Y. W. C. A. here in Lincoln reported that, right now, here in our own fair city, there are five girls living in one room, pooling their resources, in order to keep alive and decent, and that's just one case out of a thousand.

The wife that is really helping in the world by doing a good work, regardless of salary, is certainly to be admired. Or the wife with a profession, or a real executive and a woman of real brains, has more reason than any for working. But more than ever, isn't she just the very woman who should be in the home, giving the world the benefit of her superior education and culture through the medium of her children? No matter what her job, a man somewhere, some how, can fill it to perfection, but there's just one job and only one, that no man can fill. And these small fry, myself included, with an earning ability of ten to twenty-five dollars a week, should be at home, not out there, making their salaries twice over, by keeping the expenses down, finding the loose ends, and in other words making a home.

So I think the working wife is a trouble maker in the home and also out in the world, with very few exceptions, of course. She not only carries her independent and uncompromising ways at home but to a certain extent to the office. She is never as dependable as a single girl for back of it all she still has "Old Ball and Chain" and really, though she may never admit it, "That's her ace in the hole."

So, girls, make your money at home, by the ways and means of slicing the bacon, and when closing time comes and you check up, you will find you are holding your own with the "Working Wife" in every way, even including such luxuries as mutual respect, contentment and peace of mind. MRS. TWENTY-FIVE.

Spring's Responsibilities.
Spring is here and June, with its weddings and graduations, coming. Both mean new lives for the participants. These occasions also mean gifts, and much puzzling over what to give. Then there is the problem of what to wear. Which latter question is the one propounded in the following letter:

Dear Minerva: I am to be married in June, and am wondering if I'll have need of an evening dress. The ceremony will take place in the afternoon, which will be followed by an informal dinner served for us at the home of friends. How long before the dinner hour should I change for the evening dress? We are going away that evening. We are thinking of having a ring ceremony, but do not know what steps to take to have one. Please explain.

ENGAGED.
A. No, you will not need an evening dress. You would keep on your wedding dress for the dinner and until you changed to a traveling dress. The groom, of course, buys the ring and gives it in the keeping of the best man, and he produces it in the marriage ceremony when the minister asks for it.

THE Only Real Test for BAKING POWDER is in the Baking. For best results use KC BAKING POWDER. Same Price For Over 38 Years. 25 ounces for 25¢. MILLIONS OF POUNDS USED BY OUR GOVERNMENT.

There is a regular service for the single ring and one for the double one. Your minister will go over the service with you, so you will know just what you are expected to do. In case you use the double ceremony, the bride buys the groom's ring.

Dear Minerva: Will you please give me a little advice on what to give a girl friend for a graduation gift. I have been going with her for a year. A. L. It depends largely upon what you want to spend. Something in the popular costume jewelry, a nice vanity case, a fitted week-end bag, pen and pencil set, handbag, gloves, box silk hose, box fine handkerchiefs, monogrammed stationery, manicure set, dresser set, perfume, atomizer for perfume, silk scarf, lace collar and cuff set, memory book, book or set of books, picture, mirror—any of these things are appropriate and would win appreciation from the recipient.

Questions In Brief.
E. C. E.: It is often difficult, or impossible, rather, to judge what certain men see in certain women, and vice versa. Maybe the fact that she admires and flatters him has something to do with it—all in fact. What can a wife do under the circumstances? Leave him? Tell him if he prefers such a woman to you, you will leave the field clear for her?
How well do you love him? Enough to stand by until he comes to? What is best for him? This is his first evidence of unfaithfulness, you say, and it has not

Talks To Parents

BY ALICE JUDSON PEALE.
(Associated Press.)

Many a woman who prides herself on her ability to set a charming table and serve an attractive meal keeps the aesthetic aspects of her cooking for company and serves her child amorphous masses of food which, while possessing all the proper calories and vitamins, would cause anyone to turn his thoughts from food to things more pleasant.

Often the green vegetable, potato and meat served to the child, who is not yet able to cut his own food, are all mixed together, forming a uniform mass from which all discernible flavor and consistency have been lost. Frequently this is done in a misguided effort to make sure that the child does not bolt all his meat at once, or to force him to eat some hated vegetable. The most usual consequence of this method is to make the child lose entirely his interest in his dinner.

Sometimes, too, in the hope of stimulating him to eat a great deal, he is given enormous portions, the mere sight of which is discouraging. He looks at his plate and knows he is beaten before he starts.

The children's food is apt to vary little from day to day. They get bored with the same dull dishes which are never dressed up to look tempting like the pretty desserts their mothers serve to guests.

The child's food should be served neatly and his table should be set as carefully as that of his parents. Every effort should be made to see that his food is properly seasoned, and that the individual flavors of the different kinds of food are preserved. He should be given small portions; if he wants more he can always be served again. His menu should be as varied as possible, with attention to those nice details which he certainly will enjoy as much as do the ladies of the Tuesday luncheon club.

To the discerning eye the manner of a mother's "goodby" to her little one reveals the quality and wisdom of her love.

A certain type of mother when parting from her child for more than a few hours pretends a great scene, dramatizing her own emotions. She is not satisfied until the child, who at the outset usually is in a perfectly rational state of mind, and perhaps even somewhat pleased at the novel prospect of being cared for by someone else, has been reduced to an orgy of tears which certainly will harm more than they do his mother.

She makes her farewell as long as possible, gathers him to her bosom, tells him not to cry and, of course, raves from him the loud wails of desolation which she fully expects. Not satisfied with this, she is likely to come back several times, "just to see if he's all right."

After this it is not strange that the person left in charge often must report that during his mother's absence the child was deeply unhappy and apparently inconsolable. The wonder is that many children possess such healthy spirits that after reached a phase of serious neglect to you. Probably you are exaggerating his interest in her, and doubtless it is a remark that she has it all over you in every way was the fruit of a hated moment of argument. We all make wild remarks now and then.

Use your intelligence and don't jump at conclusions.

Belle: Even the most bashful young man finds a way to let a girl friend know he likes her. Don't worry. It will come out in time.

A. It depends largely upon what you want to spend. Something in the popular costume jewelry, a nice vanity case, a fitted week-end bag, pen and pencil set, handbag, gloves, box silk hose, box fine handkerchiefs, monogrammed stationery, manicure set, dresser set, perfume, atomizer for perfume, silk scarf, lace collar and cuff set, memory book, book or set of books, picture, mirror—any of these things are appropriate and would win appreciation from the recipient.

Louise: You will have to write Jack that you made a mistake in judging your liking for him as love, even though you say you "simply" love him. You are getting deeper and deeper involved through writing daily love letters that you do not feel. It is unfortunate that he is the dependent sort who leans upon you for encouragement. However, the job will not do him nearly the permanent injury that it would do him and you as well, were you to continue with the engagement and ultimately marry him, all because you were afraid to break with him, and all the time loving another man.

You have been rather a victim of your own indecision and susceptibility in the past. Now is the time to show character and strength in doing what you know to be the right thing to do.

mother has actually gone they at once regain their cheerfulness and become absorbed in the occupation of the moment.

There is, however, another type of mother who says "goodby" affectionately, cheerfully and quickly. If she discusses the impending separation it is in terms of the engagement and ultimately marry him, all because you were afraid to break with him, and all the time loving another man.

HOOPER CONFERS ON LABOR PLAN
Takes Up Question of Furnishing Employment on Projects.
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 8.—Means of counteracting periods of unemployment were discussed with President Hoover today by former Gov. Ralph O. Brewster of Maine, who declared that American methods of keeping employment statistics are ten years behind those of other nations.

Mr. Brewster called on behalf of the conference those of other nations which met at New Orleans in December and took up the question of balancing periods of unemployment with construction of government works, as advocated by Mr. Hoover in his campaign speeches.

The principal question at this time, Brewster said, is in keeping an adequate check on the extent of unemployment. He declared that the states are better agencies for the development of this data than would be a centralized federal bureau. This, he declared, was proved a year ago by the unemployment report of the department of labor in response to a senate resolution asking for statistics on unemployment.

Mrs. Claudia B. Had she been named to the board of control by the governor and confirmed by the state senate, her salary would have been $416.67 per month.

Robert Hart and Charles Thornton, both of Omaha, are in the county jail here following what State Sheriff W. C. Condit described as a "wild chase" from Gretna to Havelock Sunday afternoon. The men managed to keep ahead of Condit's larger car, he said, although he was traveling at seventy miles an hour or more most of the time. Condit stated Monday morning that Hart and Thornton would be charged with violating the state speed law and possibly with failure to halt at a state highway stop sign.
